BISMARCK AND HOLLAND.

he King of the Netherlands is Very III-What May Follow it,

WILLIAM III.

The states general of the Netherlands as: sented, three years ago, to the wish of the king that his only child, the Princess Wilbelmina, born Aug. 31, 1880, should succeed him in the throne, a council of regency to be presided over by her mother, Queen Emma, to govern previous to her attaining her majority. King William, of whose death news is daily expected, is also Grand Duke of Luxemburg, but the union between the Netherlands and the Duchy is personal not political, and the states general (the parlia ment) of the Netherlands is not competent to settle the order of succession for Luxemburg, which has a constitution and legislature of its own. By race, language, and history, the Grank Duchy of Luxemburg is indisputably German Not only did it always form a part of the old German empire, but it was a member of the Germanic confederation created in 1815 and dissolved in 1866. Indeed, it was not until May, 1867, that Prussia renounced the right of main-Taining a garrison in Luxemburg, which was thereupon declared neutral territory.

Bismarck has always regretted the renunciation of a stronghold which has been deemed of the utmost moment to the defence of Germany, and he only assented to it because at the time he was not ready to contend with France. The chance of recovering the vantage ground then lost will be offered on the death of King William, and the ex Duke of Nassau, on the death of the Prince of Orange, about three years ago, put forward a claim to both the Kingdom of the Netherlands and the Grand Duchy of Luxem burg. At the same time Bismarck notified Europe that any attempt to make an inter to do this would be resisted by them, but it first. does not appear that the claim of the Netherlands on Luxemburg could be established, provided the will of the Luxemburgians should be in favor of union with Germany, which is probable. In the event of Germany preparing to seize Holland itself the case would be different. It would remain to be seen whether the Dutch people, whose heroic defence of their country is a glorious tradition of the country, would fail to make a successful stand against the aggressor, or of receiving material assistance from a power or powerful undeterred by Bismarck's intimation that interference between him and the people of the Netherlands would not be tolerated. The situation is one of remark. able interest and danger.

Wilhelm III, has been King of Netherlands since March 17, 1849. Ten years before he had married the Princess Sophie, daughter of King Wilhelm I of Wurttemberg She died on June 3, 1877. In January, 1879, the old king married Emma, daughter of Prince George Victor of Waldeck, a young woman born in 1858. Princess Wilhelmina, only surviving child of the king, is the daughter of his second wife.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 19.—King William today opened the parliament of Holland. He thanked the people of the kingdom for the evidences of national loyalty and devotion to the throne which they manifested so con spicuously during the recent celebration of his seventieth birthday. The finances of Holland, and her relations with all foreign countries, the king said, were in a satisfactory condition. He hoped the bill for a revision of the constitution would be passed by the states-general, and announced that measures would be proposed for the promotion of agriculture in Holland and for the improvement of the training of Dutch youth for service in the navy. In conclusion King William said he approved the conduct of the army and navy.

KNOCKED INTO THE FOG.

THE BELLEVILLES ARE NOT FOUND AFTER THE STRUGGLE.

The Wonderful Controversial Powers of the Visitors - The Umpire Caved on Every Occasion But the Kingston Had Their Batting Clothes on and Did Great Execution.

Again they went under ! We mean the Belleville ball-bangers. But it was not without asstruggle.

The controversial powers of the Bellevilles seemed to be unlimited. From the start they kicked with vehemence, and in the eighth inning of the Kingstons were strong ly disposed to quit. But they didn't. And the umpire generally stood in with the Bellevilles.

In the first inning of the Kingstons Allen hit to Lyons, got his base and went to second. The Bellevilles said he was out at first, and though he got there safely the umpire, after so agreeing, reversed his decision. He said he was tooking at second base, and, though he didn't see the cut off, gave the field the benefit of the doubt. This was a strange way of umpiring traly. Again Osterhout, in the second inning, was retired at second base though he was clearly there in time.

In the third inning Jamieson hit to Lyons and Allen dodged him and reached, second, Jamieson was put out at lirst. The umpire said Allen was safe, and thou the Bellevilles made a row of course. In the fourth inning Jamieson hit to the first base. It was called a foul, but it struck an obstruction and bounded into the diamond. The umpire maintained his decision. The Kingstons objected, but let the umpire rule. They were not sorry, for by Jamieson's smash of the sphere subsequently one man scored, and two more scored a moment afterwards.

In the seventh, when Osterhout told Somers to take his second base on a block ball, Dyson, consulting the umpire, called him out, as the ball had got back to the box and down to the base before him. But the grand and final kick was in the eighth, and we describe it later on.

It was a comical scene as the whole of the Bellevilles made for the plate when a controversy occurred. Morrison 'chewed the rag' continuously, and the crowd urged him to chew gum and save his breath.

Notwithstanding all these difficulties the Amgstons won in good style. They did some heavy hitting. Neither pitcher did good execution. Errors were also plentiful. The game lasted over two hours. There was a large andience and the match was witnessed with considerable interest.

At 3:40 o'clock the Kingstons went to the hat. Osterhout sent a ball over the fence for two bags. Allen then ait and made his base, and was declared out at first, but when Young hit to third Osterhout scored, sliding in. Garrett flew out to Farrell, and Young and Jamieson crossed the plate.

Gilman took the bat for Bellevilles, hit national question of the succession would be safely, and when the pitcher threw to cut resented by Germany. Jones' foul was admirably from news reaching us as to the feeling of taken by Jamieson, near the grand stand, the Dutch people on the subject the attempt after a long run, and Farrell was retired at

The Kingstons suffered whitewashes in the next three innings. A double play in the third inning put out Allen at second and Jamieson at first. There was a dispute about Allen's cut off and though Sagendorff had declared him safe reversed his decision. In the fourth Trainor struck out and Am bach was retired at the third base. Slug ging followed and Somers crossed the plate. On Allen's clip to O'Leary McMillen and Jamieson scored. Jamieson brought Allen home, and on Garrett's smash to centre field both him and Jamieson got home. Then Trainor fouled out.

But how fared the Bellevilles.

In the second inning Morrison got a base on balls. Gilman's hit to right field let Morrison home, but Kanean expired at third. In the third inning Reardon got first on Ambach's muff and home on Farrel's grounder to second. In the next three innings the Bellevilles were shut out. In the fourth Kanean struck out. O'Leary gave McMillan a pretty fly and Gilman sent a ball over the fence. He waited at third for a chance to get home and did not get it. Quick work was done in the fourth, Dyson flying to McMillan and Reardon and Jones retiring at first by sharp fielding. In the sixth Morrison and Kanean were cut off at second, the latter by the catcher. The Kingstons were also blanked in the fifth and sixth innings, (Kanean having taken the box), Somers, in the fifth, striking out and McMillan fouling out. In the sixth inning Osterhout was left at third and Young gave Lyons a fly, and a double play was consummated, Allen being cut off at

In the sixth inning Jamieson got his base, after his fourth strike, and Garrett gave Kanean a fly. Trainor hit hot towards Farrell, and before the ball could be fielded Jamieson was home and Trainor on third. He scored on Ambach's fly to Farrell. Somers hit to Kanean, the ball glanced off him and was thrown by Dyson over the baseman's head. The ball was blocked, and Osterhout told Somers to go to second, but the ball was sent to the pitcher's box and to Lyons and the side was declared out, though not without much objection.

The Bellevilles made one each in the three last innings. In the seventh O'Leary got a base on balls and Lyons, hitting to first, scored. Dyson gave Allen a fly which he took after a quick run. In the eighth O'Leary lifted the sphere to Ambach. It rolled to the fence and before he got it to the plate Morrison had scored, but Kanean was cut off there. In the ninth Reardon hit into the fog beyond Trainor and sent Lyons home.

In the seventh inning of the Kingstons McMillan was hit by the ball. He got Gilman. Jamieson was hit by the ball and streets, had his case adjourned. Bernard got his base. Garrett was similarly treated Trainor's name was called, but he did not and Dyson objected. He said the batter answer. He was charged with driving a was not entitled to the base. "Well then," said Ald. Wilson, "let them pay it." Ald. C. Robinson thought $100 enough. If all the cities and towns about gave $100 apiece the thirty or forty sufferers would be better off than they were before the fire. Several aldermen exclaimed "No! No! The resolution was passed on a division. Alds. McIntyre, Rees, C. Robinson and Wilson voted against it. Ald.
