COL. F. D. GRANT.

The Republican Nominee for Secretary of New York State.

Col. Fred D. Grant, who has been nominated by the Republicans of New York for secretary of state, was born in St. Louis shortly after the Mexican war. During the civil war he was too young to take an active part, but on many occasions was with his academy, and was outpost duty and took part in several combats with the Indians. In 1873 he was made aide-de-camp with the rank of lieutenant colonel on Gen. Sheridan's staff. In 1881 he gave up his commission, and since then has led a quiet life, passing the most of his time with his two brothers. Soon after his resignation he married the daughter of H. H. Honore, a Chicago millionaire, and they resided in the house which was the scene of his father's prolonged illness. Two years ago Col. Grant became director in the New York Steam company, but last spring he withdrew from active interest in the company, and has since then devoted himself to his mother.

During Gen. Grant's long illness Col. Grant discharged the duties of a faithful son, and rarely left the bedside of his father.

PRINCE FERDINAND.

His Entrance Into Bulgaria and His Enthusiastic Reception.

The Prince Ferdinand may not find his throne in Bulgaria entirely comfortable. He is occupying it now, that is if he is still there, somewhat on his own hook. As you remember his election has not been confirmed by the sultan of Turkey, nor approved by the European powers which signed the treaty of Berlin in 1878.

This young prince is an Austrian subject and a Roman Catholic. Hitherfo he has resided on the estates of the Hungarian ancestors of his mother at Ebenthal. When a deputation from the sobranje or Bulgarian National assembly offered him the crown be accepted after a few days' consideration, having first resigned his commission as an officer in the Austrian army. The emperor of Austria; it is said, did not sanction this step, so the young prince took it on his own respon-

RECEPTION OF PRINCE FERDINAND. The foreign minister of the Bulgarian provisional government went into Hungary to fetch him, with all the following of aides-decamp, staff and suit usual on the transportation of a king. They sailed down the Danube, and when they got to the Bulgarian frontier, regents, governors and other notables went on board to meet him. At Widdin the prince first touched Bulgarian soil. There he was enthusiastically received. The picture represents his reception. At Rustchuk another reception was held. Tirnova, the capital of Bulgaria, was reached at 9 o'clock in the evening. He was enthusiastically received. After attending service at the cathedral the next morning, Sunday, he was escorted to the hall where the grand sobranje was sitting and was recaived with prolonged cheering. The metropolitan archbishop delivered a short address and administered the oath to Ferdinand, who then signed the constitution. His proclamation was then read. It began in this wise: "We, Ferdinand I, by the grace of God and the will of the people, Prince of Bulgaria," and ended with the words: "Long live free and independent Bulgaria!" The Russian government refuses to recognize the election of Prince Ferdinand or his position in Bulgaria, and there may be "music" over the matter any day.

A story is told of a game of poker that moved the capital of Dakota. It was at that memorable winter session at Yankton where several river towns were pitted against one another as to which should secure the coveted honor. It happened that two towns were tied on the vote, and a single additional ballot would have secured the prize for either. It was in this condition of affairs that a job was put up to secure the single lacking vote by inveigling a poker loving member into a game of draw. There were four in the party—three from one of the rival towns and the proposed victim from the other. The game was in an upper room of a hotel and play was high and furious, as the participants had full purses. The great game was, after awhile, opened with $100 in the pot. It had been agreed to give the victim a fine hand and to give one of the other three conspirators a hand that would beat it. He got the hand, looked at it and said, as he raised the ante, "It will take $200 to draw

The other two conspirators passed out and the victim raised $200. They seesawed until $2,000 was up, when they drew. The conspirator took one card to four kings. The victim hesitated, and finally drew three. Then the betting began, and did not stop till $2,000 more was on the table. Then the conspirator made his side even and said:

"I am out of money, but I'll raise you 160 acres of land in Beadle county. No, I won't, either, but I'll tell you what I will do-I'll bet you my vote on the capital." "Done," said the victim, and the hands were spread out. The conspirator had four kings and reached for the pot. "Hold on," said the victim, as he laid down four aces. "Your vote will bring the capital to Bismarck," and it d.d. His hand had been a queen full on aces, and he discarded the queens, but where he got the aces nobody could tell.-Chicago Tribune.
