A CAPTAINS FAITH.

EXPLANATORY NOTES BY REV. GEO. P. HAYES, D. D., LL. D.

Lesson I of the International Series (Fourth Quarter) for Sunday, Oct. 2. Text of the Lesson, Matt. viil, 5-13. Golden Text, Matt. viii, 8-10, V. 5. A centurion at Capernaum-A very large number of the lessons of this quarter show events or utterances in the vicinity of Capernaum, which was during all this time Christ's home. "A centurion in the Roman army corresponded to a captain in ours. His command was 100 men.

Vs. C-0. The disease-Palsy is a disease w. ich consists of loss of power over the muscles, and may be either complete, leaving the body helpless, or partial, leaving the muscles. active but uncontrollable. There are some reasons for believing this case was of the Intter kind, and probably what is now known as St. Vitus' dance. If so, then the "grievously tormented" will be appreciated by every one that has seen a case of this disease.

Christ's reply (v. 7) was a quick answer to the centuriou's petition for help, and a full justification of the faith that led him to seek Christ's aid. V. 8 shows the conception the centurion had of Christ's power over discuse. This case of the centurion was among the very earliest of Christ's manifestations of his power to do signs at a distance. The centurion's faith was shown in saying that the Sa-vious's coming was not needed. Vs. 10, 11. The Gentiles-No doubt this centurion was a Gentile, and this is the first manifestation of the Gentile faith that was to be so largely called forth after the day of Pentecost. V. 11 has been abundantly fulfilled as a prophecy in the history of the

The expression "shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven" is the Oriental method of expressing a thorough home welcome. The whole transaction becomes a type of the future spread of hisg spel among the Gentiles, and this centurion is the first fruit of that ingathcring which has teen accomplished in the Gentile world.

V. 12, 13. Rejection-The alternative of rejection is set forth in v. 12. The Gentiles of the east and west are set in contrast with the children of the kingdom, and the race is represented by one or the other of these. So also is each individual person. Those who will not accept Christ are to be cast out into the outer carkness. Oriental feasts were at CARRUTHERS BROS., Financial Agents, King | night, with the house brilliantly lighted. The outer darkness is the exclusion from that light and plenty and comfort which reign

The Saviour now put the centurion's faith and the faith of the people to another test. He said, "Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it unto thee." The conduct of each one was now to show how far he believed in the Savour's word. If the centurion's faith was as strong as he said, he would go home confident of the result.

Note 1. Military officers are generally supposed to be a heartless class. Here is one who had a tender regard for those under him. If employers and people of influence would have similar care for those within their power, the relations of affection would be as close as they are here.

2. Many pupils to whom this lesson will be taught, who have had Christian training from their youth, will illustrate v. 12 to their eternal disgrace and pain. And many chitdren of heathen and vicious parents, to whom this lesson will be taught in our mission schools in this and other lands, will illustrate v. 11 to their everlasting honor and joy. SUGGESTIVE APPLICATIONS.

V. 8. I am not worthy that thou shouldest come under my roof-People of authority and of wealth in these days approach the church, if they approach it at all, as if their presence was a favor. They seem to have a lurking idea that they are to be praised by a minister for condescending to attend when he preaches. Whether they actually go so far in thought as to suppose that they are conferring a favor upon the Almighty by using a part of the Sabbath in riding to church, and fanning themselves with an indifferent attention upon all the services, may be a question they would not like to answer to themselves. It becomes a kind of constitutional habit with them to patronize everything. They have a patronizing air toward all who are socially on a different level from themselves, and they carry this same air into religion and church work. The centurion, though a man of position and a representative of Roman authority, not only possessed more sense but more humility. He recognized the great favor he was seeking; he also had some proper appreciation of the dignity and the power of the person from whom he asked so great a favor. He did not belittle himself, but rather showed true greatness in his huntility. There is a useful lesson here

V. 13. As thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee-If the prayers of ordinary Christians were answered in this way now, about how many do you think would receive what they ask for! About how large a proportion of those who profess regularly and daily to ask blessings of the Lord really and truly have faith to believe that they will receive exactly what they ask for? If the answer in every case were to be, "According to thy faith" so be it done unto thee, how much would they really get! Now, the fact is that the answer which Jesus made on earth to the centurion is but an indication of the answer which he usually makes to all who seek him. The Christian gets not what he asks for, but according to the faith with which he asks.

HINTS FOR PRIMARY CLASSES. The place-Capernaum, at the northwestern end of the sea of Galilee, where Jesus often went. His second miracle was performed on the son of a nobleman who lived in Capernaum. It was a military post and the home of Simon Peter, where Jesus cured Peter's wife. It was the home or headquarters to which Jesus often returned. The persons-The centurion or captain of one hundred men, a Roman military officer; his servant, who was ill; and Jesus Christ, the great Physician. The story-The fame of Jesus had become so great that many people flocked to hear him and to be healed of various diseases whenever he entered a city. Soon after coming to Capernaum this time, the Roman officer came to him to beg that he would heal his servant, who was very ill. Servants were often a part of the family in those days, and much beloved when found faithful. They remained a lifetime with the same family, so that their interests were identical. This officer came himself to see Jesus, instead of sending a messenger, which shows how great his personal interest was in him.

Although this officer held a position of rank and authority, he was very humble when speaking to Jesus. He must have known that Jesus was his Lord and no common physician. He meant, As I give orders to my men to do one thing and another and they obey me, so know a word from you can in the same way command disease. He had probably heard how the nobleman's son was cured when Jesus was in Cana, and of other wonderful cure-He said, "Speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed." Jesus was surprised

dence and belief in him as this Roman officer

Jesus Christ is always pleased with real trust and faith in him. Every one likes to be trusted, especially when doing good to others.

The good news-V. 11 contains a precious shall come from the east and west and shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven; but alas, the next verse tells us that the children of the kingdom shall be cast out. It is not enough to belong to a pious family or even to belong to the church; not enough to attend Sunday The above qualify our NEW AUTUMN DRESS FABRICS, and school and religious services. There must be true faith in Christ to secure a place in heaven, and this any one may possess, no matter in what land or what nation or what church. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, world.-Sunday School World.

CELIA LOGAN.

Work.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.-The Logan sisters were all talented. Eliza Logan, the eldest, was a dramatic star, whom the elderly theater goers remember only to praise. Olive is well known as a writer and lecturer, while

Most of them were works of fiction; but some were scientific, which not every woman, or man either, engaged in literary work could have taken hold of. At this time she met socially as well as professionally many of the then prominent men and women of letters of London, by whom she was recognized as one of the brightest in the profession. Charles Reade was one of her sincerest friends. She it was who suggested to him the ending for "Put Yourself in His Place." She also assisted him in preparing the chapter which describes the flood.

While in London and subsequently during several years' residence in France and Italy, Miss Logan was a regular correspondent of The Boston Saturday Evening Gazette and The Golden Era of San Francisco, journals which then held high literary prominence and enjoyed a particularly sunny heyday of prosperity. She also won considerable-fame as a writer of short stories for the magazines of England and this country. She married abroad during our civil war, but returned to this country soon after it ended and has remained here ever since, She lived in Washington, writing stories and corresponding for several journals. At length she became associate editor of Don Piatt's paper, The Capital, so distinguished at that time as the wittiest and most speak-yourmind journal in existence. Many of the vigorous editorials which made it famous were written by Celia Logan, though, of course, that fact was only known within The Capital office, and to a few outsiders who were closely connected with the career of The Capital. As is the case of hundreds of other journalistic writers, it has been her fortune to do much of her best work in this impersonal way, and so lose the credit of what would have made her famous.

In addition to her original writing she has done much excellent work as a translator from the French and Italian. Curiously erough, her first efforts in that field were made in converting American war news from English into Latin. She lived in Milan, Italy, during our late war. The facilities of the Milanese press for obtaining American A. J. McMAHON, war news were then much below what was demanded by the importance of the occasion. Miss Logan was known as one of the literati, and as it was understood that she regularly received news from her own country concerning the struggle which then engrossed the attention of the civilized world, the directors of the Milanese press appealed to her for aid. Not then being sufficiently acquainted with Italian to translate into that language, and English being a sealed book to Milanese journalists, a compromise suggested by her was tried and proved to be a happy solution of the difficulty. She first put the American war news into Latin and then the journalists turned the Latin into Italian.

Another important branch of Miss Logan's literary work has been the rewriting, adapting and translating of plays. As in the case of so much of her editorial work, the credit ofwhat she has done in this direction has gone to others, who have won fame and fortune by her combined literary and dramatic talent. One of her works, the drama, "An American Marriage," has been eminently successful in winning both the plaudits of the public and the approbation of the press. Her intimate relations with the stage have given her unusual advantages for critical judgment upon it and literary work pertaining to it. She contributed to The Sunday Dispatch a few years ago a long series of articles under the title, "These Our Actors," which attracted much favorable comment.

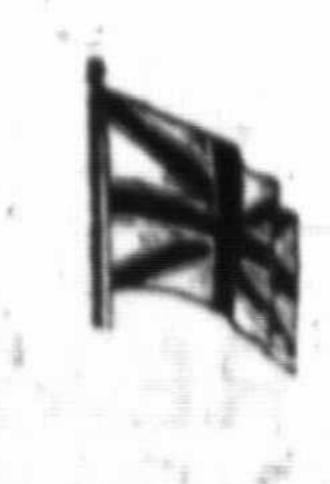

As a poet Miss Logan first became known. Some of her earlier versified productions entitle her to rank with the best of America's minor poets. Her mind is analytical, more logical than is generally expected of woman. Her style in writing, though graceful and replete with charming fancy, is condensed and forceful in consequence of her journalistic training. For several years past she has been a resident of New York, but is now in Alexandria, Va. Not being blessed with as good health as in the past, she does less writing than she did a few years ago.
