GENTLEMEN, -I again have to ask you to send us some more of your excellent Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. It has proved such a valuable remedy in all cases of Pulmonary Complaint and for building up the Constitution of our little ones, many of whom come to us in a very weak and debilitated state. We have come to think that we cannot do without a supply of PUTTNER'S EMULSION in our home. We have no trouble in getting the children to take it, in fact they often ask and sometimes cry

F. Marion Crawford, the novelist, and poet of Philadelphia's recent centennial, is a man of many accomplishments besides his literary gifts. He is a good musician, being able to accompany his own songs on either piano or guitar. He is a rare linguist, and an athlete of acknowledged power. Although the pen is the instrument by which he is known to the world, he is equally accomplished in the use of the fencer's foils. Mr. Crawford is of American parentage, but he was born in Italy, and has just taken up his permanent residence in that country, in the Villa Crawford, overlooking the bay of Naples.

Claus Spreckels, of California, who has been termed the Sugar King of the Sandwich Islands, is a German who began life in the west as the keeper of a grocery store. He was an expert chemist, and invented some new process for refining sugar. It was estimated three years ago that he made 600 barrels of sugar a day, each barrel worth $30, thereby giving him an income of $6,570,000 a year. His wealth is now estimated at $25,-000,000. Mr. Spreckels is an old man, but he is still very active and energetic. He speaks with a strong German accent, is simple in his dress and domestic in his habits.

Ed Scheffelin, who sold out the celebrated Tough Nut mine in Arizona for something like a million dollars, wears his hair in long ringlets and is somewhat eccentric in his never appealed to him in vain. Up to the hard working miner and knew nothing of the ways of the world. With the proceeds of the sale he went to San Francisco to enjoy his honestly acquired riches. He had determined to have the best of everything, and registered at the Baldwin hotel. When mealtime came he sought entrance to the dining room in his shirt sleeves. The sable doorkeeper told him he must put his coat on before going in. Ed got mad at this infringement on his private rights and long established custom, and exclaimed: "I guess you don't know who I am, you black rascal." "Dat don't make no odds, sir." The honest miner was riled clear through and through and sent for Landlord Pearson. The latter told him he must finish dressing before going to eat, no matter who he was. Mr. Scheffelin is a man of observing qualities, and he has not been slow in adapting himself to his changed circumstances. He has good business sense and although anything but stingy. takes good care of his fortune.

"Jenny Lind," said Miss Emma Thursby to Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton recently, "is living on a lovely street in London called 'The Boltons,' and her house, which is covered with graceful vines, is shut in from the noisy city by trees and fragrant flowers. But the famous singer is a suffering invalid now, rarely seeing one, and when American reporters call, as they do now and then, they are met at the door by a faithful old servant, who has watched over her mistress for thirty years past, and who delivers this brief but grateful message, 'that Jenny Lind wishes them to say that she will never cease to love the American people with all her heart.' One of Jenny Lind's most intimate friends and neighbors is Mme. Albani, who lives with her husband just across the street from the 'Swedish Nightingale.' Albani's voice! No. I don't think it in any way phenomenal, but she has gained a great success because she has always been an earnest worker, and then she has chosen for her home the best city in the world for a singer-London. Why do I not go there myself? Oh, I am too good an American to be willing to live abroad, and then in any case I could not endure the London climate. You see I have just won back my health, and I do not want to lose it again.

An Extraordinary Mind Reader.

The gift of "tongues" has hitherto been considered a special blessing communicated by the spirit of pentecost. But a peasant of Westernhausen, in the kingdom of Wurtemberg, Germany, is reported to be possessed of that gift now. The girl is 19 years old and reported to be sound and hearty every morning, but hardly do the shades of evening begin to fall when she is attacked by nervous twitchings. In that condition she is troubled with a knack of mind reading, and it asked questions in tongues she does not understand while the sun is shedding his full light upon her she will answer in the same tongues during the hours of Carkness. Less remarkable is the darkness in which her medical attendants profess to be regarding the true inwardness of her condition. She is also reported to shed her hair periodically, as fourfooters will do in summer time, and to grow a new periwig as regularly. So the medical men are dumfounded as the phenomenon .-Chicago News.

The Reward of Notoriety. "Since my husband was mixed up in that divorce case," said Mrs. Cantwell, "he has made more money by literary work than his ministerial fees amount to." "Indeed!" exclaimed Mrs. Cobwigger. "What kind of literary work does he do, may I ask!"

"Why," replied the good man's better half, "he writes those unsolicited testimonials for soaps and patent medicines."-Judge.
