HIGH NOVELTIES IN DRESS FABRICS FOR AUTUMN WEAR.

English Tea Gowns Made to Simulate the Flowing Costumes of India Princesses-Charming French Tea Gowns Embroidered in Turkish Designs.

Tea gowns have gained an important place in the toilets of ladies of fashion. The timely descriptions here given on the subject will, therefore, prove welcome to lady readers. Both descriptions and illustrations are reproduced from Harper's Bazar.

ENGLISH TEA GOWNS.

Luxurious English tea gowns made in emulation of the rich flowing costumes worn by the India princesses at the Queen's jubilee, are of soft Thibet woolens and Bengaline silks, with fronts of gold gauze and lace, trimmed with embroideries of silks and metal threads in intricate Eastern patterns. A white Thibet wool gown hanging full from the shoulders opens over a flowing front of gold silk gauze, the long wide sleeves and border wrought in red, gold and black. Lalla Rookh vests draped from each shoulder to cross on the bust with a scarf girdle below, are of crinkled white crape flecked with gold in gowns of tawny red Bengaline or of faded rose India cashmere. Artists design æsthetic gowns for their wives and sisters with classic statuesque drapery, and after French models of the last century, with full Watteau fold, giving a sweeping train, and suggesting the rich brocades of that period, with festoons of lace for their garniture. Paris modistes send out trousseau gowns of moire or of shaded | extinguishing the flame the wick should first plush or velvet, in stripes or watered, for the bodice and train, opening over straight flowing froms of white China crape or of silk veiled with lace. Corded woolens in bars and in stripes of vieux rose, sevres blue, and pale green tints are fashioned into closer princesse robes that open over long gathered front breadths of white veiling, dotted along the hem with tiny points wrought in rose or blue riks. The full sleeves are pleated to white wool undersleeves, and a wide silk scarf or half girdle crosses the loose front and disappears under the sides of the robe.

FRENCH TEA GOWN.

The picturesque costume worn by the seated figure in the illustration of English tea gowns is of a soft Florentine brocade of dark vieux rose tint, opening over a front of white crepe de Chine arranged in folds and curves that lend themselves to all the movements of the supple figure. Slight puffings of crepe trim the neck, wrists, and foot of the front; the graceful sleeves are of the same crepe. The train is lined throughout with India silk.

The other gown in the same illustration is of moss green crepeline, made with a Watteau train, with full loose front of cream white wool. A white silk girdle encircles the waist and drops down one side. The India needle work is in clusters of green leaves veined with pale pink.

The charming French tea gown here illustrated is a princesse robe of chaudron velvet embroidered in Turkish designs with red, gold and copper threads. The long blouse front is of ivory surah veiled with white net wrought with gold tigures; the white silk and net reappear on the sides of the skirts and as puffs in the slashed sleeves; the soft wide girdle is of Bengaline silk.

Latest Novelties in Dress Fabrics.

In silk fabrics moire antique, moire faille, moire brocade and faille Francaise take the lead. Novelty silks designed to make up in combination with plain silk and velvet, in nine cases out of ten, have moire stripes or moire backgrounds. Notwithstanding the increased popularity of moire silks and faille Francaise, velvets hold their own both in plain and fancy effects. In the high novelties the disposition is to a combination of several effects both of design and weaves in the same piece, as alternate stripes of moire and satin, overlaid with floral patterns pompadour colorings, this to be made up with plain faille Francaise or velvet. Designs wrought in gold and silver threads are seen in the new goods.

Laces for Evening Dresses.

Quite new are the drapery nets introduced for the autumn and winter seasons. These come in white, black and all the leading evening shades, and are designed to be made up over faille française or moire silk. These drapery nets are exceedingly dainty in effect, baving fine, web like grounds, overlaid with silk designs.

Lace flounces, for which there continues a demand, are out in new patterns in duchesso and point lact.

Newest Styles in Handkerchiefs.

Colored handkerchiefs are again in style. These come in plain colors edged with lace of same shade as the handkerchief, which is made of sheer fine muslin. Then there are colored handkerchiefs with embroidered borders edged with lace. Numbered with new things in white handkerchiefs are linen cambrie ones with hand embroidered borders, ed, al with narrow Valenciennes

ALL AROUND THE HOUSE.

A Fine New Begonia-Decorative Fabrics. A Lamp Shade That Is Much Liked. Among the more inexpensive decorative materials may be mentioned canton flannels and feits. Printed canton flannels now come in such handsome designs and fine colorings that they may be used in many instances with quite as good effect as more costly fabrics. In addition to this they wear well. The same may be said of felts. They are now shown in fine quality and very desirable colors, and there is hardly a more durable material for decorative purposes, such as portieres, curtains, etc.

· Vienna Bread.

Vienna bread is made with patent flour, compressed yeast and milk or milk and water mixed. Neither potatoes nor ferment should be employed. The following is a popular recipe: To every eight pounds of flour take three quarts of milk and water (half and half), three and one-half ounces of compressed yeast and one onnce of sait. Mix the warm water first with the milk, so as to give it a temperature of from 80 to 85 degrees Fahrenheit. Add enough flour to make a weak spenge, and take care it is not of greater consistency than batter. Crumble the yeast and mix it well in. Let the sponge stand about three-quarters of an hour, add the remaining flour slowly and also the salt. Next thoroughly kneed the dough and set it to ferment for two and a half hours. The bread is glazed by introducing a jet of steam into the oven.

A New and Handsome Begonia.

A new and handsome variety of the fine tuberous begonias that are steadily gaining Bouchet. It is a brilliant orange scarlet in color. A florist affirms that this double begonia is the coming plant and will, within a short space of time, be seen in every market and window, as geraniums and fuchsias now are, for all the culture it requires is propagation like the dahlia. Neither disease nor insects seem to attack it, and it grows into a most lovely shaped plant. Its beauty of color, abundance of lovely blossoms and pretty habit of growth will, it is thought, secure it unusual favor among this already popular class of window plants.

The Care of Lamps.

Oil in a lamp should never be allowed to get down to less than one-half the depth of the reservoir. The wick should be soft and completely fill the space for it, but without crowding. A 'amp should neither be suddenly cooled nor exposed to a draught. In be turned far down and then a sharp, quick puff blown across and not straight down upon the flame. When lamps cease to give a good light it is often because the perforations are choked with carbon and dust. Boil the burners for half an hour, using a good teaspoonful of washing soda to a quart of water. Rinse and dry. This usually remedies the difficulty.

Marsh Mallows.

A recipe for home made marsh mallows is as follows: Dissolve one haif pound of gum arabic in one pint of water and add one-half pound of fine sugar; place over the fire, stirring constantly until the syrup is dissolved and all of the consistency of honey; add gradually the whites of four eggs well beaten; stir the mixture until it becomes somewhat thin and does not adhere to the finger. Flavor to taste; pour into a tin slightly dusted with powdered starch, and when cool divide into small squares.

Brilliant Bronze Powder.

A brilliant bronze for wood plaster, paper or pasteboard is said to be made by grinding cuttings of gold beater's foil with honey. The surface to be bronzed must be coated with linseed oil and the powder then applied with a brush. The amateur will generally find it more satisfactory to use the ready made gilding or bronzing liquids.

A Very Dainty Doyley.

An attractive little doyley is finished with a band of drawn work three-quarters of an inch wide, with the edges buttonholed to keep the thread in place, inside of which is worked a row of forget-me-nots in blue silk.

To Stain a Common Wood Floor. The easiest way to stain a common wood floor is probably by applying a mixture of one part turpentine and two parts raw linseed oil, colored to the desired shade with burned umber or powdered sienna.

Favorite Model for Fancy Lamp Shade. An attractive form of the fancy lamp shade, which is one of the first of decorative objects that strike the eye upon entering a room and should therefore be particularly pretty, is the plaited shade. This is the favored model for the tissue paper shades so much in vogue and is equally well liked in richer and more effective material. Perhaps one secret of its popularity is that it is very readily made.

The shade represented in the cut consists of a foundation of net on a wire frame or one of the cheap paper shades, on which is mounted pale rose colored satin or silk, laid m fine plaits, gathered in closely at the top and finished with a plaiting of rose colored moire ribbon. A notched plaiting of silk is set on with a heading around the lower edge and a graceful spray of roses and leaves is fastened on by a bow of similar ribbon.

PLAITED LAMP SHADE.

Lace can be used for the bottom of the shade instead of ribbon, and fruit for the ornament in place of flowers, or any other changes that one's fancy suggests. A spray of paper flowers is generally employed when the shade is made simply of colored tissue

Hints Here and There. Bolsters are again made flat as well as round, and pillows are made larger, though not quite square.

A dish of fruit or a low mass of flowers in the center is the prettiest of simple decorations for the dinner table.

Boiling water made strong with ammonia and applied with a whisk broom cleans willow chairs admirably. With a long handled gauze wire soap shaker one can not only make suds quickly and conveniently, but can use up every odd and end of soap.
