A PHENOMENAL PUPIL.

COMPLETELY METAMORPHOSED BY A MORPHIA INJECTION.

A Case For Medical Study-A Nurse's Peculiar Experience-A Young Girl Doing Her Best to Wreck Herself-Caught in Time For a Cure.

The case in point is that of a young lady about 20 years of age who attends a fashionable boarding school near the City of Brotherly Love. During the term which ended last June she was the phenomenal pupil of the institution, rating as perfect in every branch except mathematics. Her vacation was passed at one of the ultra fashionable summer resorts, where she made the acquaintance of a young married woman, one of the leaders of New York society, and it was this "friend" that taught her the use of the hypodermic injection. She returned to school at the opening of the fall term completely metamorphosed. Her sustained cleverness had given way to flashes of brilliancy, followed by moods when the simplest sentences seemed unintelligible to her confused intellect. From time to time she would ask permission to go to the room set apart for hospital purposes, and there she would lie for a day at a time, only rousing herself when any one approached the table, on which stood an ink bottle and a stylographic pen.

The nurse, having occasion to send a message to the doctor, attempted to write with this pen, the young girl at that time being asleep. The pen not only refused to write, but the practiced eye of the nurse instantly recognized in the point the puncturing needle of a hypodermic syringe. This led to an examination of the ink bottle. It was a four ounce bottle, but there was no ink in it. It was painted black on the outside, and contained a solution of morphia, enough for 128 one-half grain doses, or sufficient to last until the Christmas holidays if one injection a day were taken. The principal of the school was summoned immediately, and the sleeping girl's arm bared. It was punctured from the shoulder almost to the hand, and the livid blue marks confirmed the suspicion, which was changed to absolute certainty by the small abscess which had begun to form in the forearm just above the wrist. On being questioned the whole truth was finally arrived at, and the parents of the young lady immediately removed her from school. The habit has been formed about two months only, and there is a possibility that a cure can be effected. -Philadelphia News.

Capture of The Mercury Editor.

During the 15th of March Hardee was retreating before us, having for his rear guard a brigade composed of the troops which had garrison d Charleston, commanded by Gen. Alfred Rhett. Kilpatrick's cavalry was in advance of the left wing, and during the day some of the skirmishers had come suddenly upon Gen. Ethett, accompanied by a few of his men, and had captured him. Rhett before the war had been one of the editors of The Charleston Mercury, one of the strongest secession papers in the south. He was sent by Kilpatrick to Gen. Sherman, Sherman, while stationed in Charleston before the war, had been acquainted with Rhett, and not wishing to have him under his immediate charge, he sent him to me. Rhett spent that night in my tent, and as I had also been stationed at Fort Moultrie in 18545, and had choice eigars and tobaccos. Pool and billiard often met him, we had a long chat over old times and about common acquaintances in Charleston,

> The following morning Rhett was sent to the rear in charge of the cavalry. He was handsomely dressed in the Confederate uniform, with a pair of high boots beautifully stitched. He was deeply mortified at having been "gobbled up" without a chance to fight. One of my staff told me that he saw Rhett a few days later, trudging along under guard, but the beautiful boots were missing—a soldier had exchanged a very coarse pair of army shoes for them. Rhett said that in all his troubles he had one consolation, that of knowing that no one of Sherman's men could get on those boots, -Gen. H. W. Slocum in The Century.

The Dog Failed Him. A certain resident of this village is the proud possessor of a handsome Newfoundland dog and a small boy. He had read much of the instinct possessed by this breed of dogs, which leads them to rescue people from drowning. One day not long since the man, the dog and the small boy were walking along the banks of the stream that flows through this village. Coming to a place where the water was over the boy's head the idea occurred to the man that here was an opportunity to test the life saving qualities of the dog, and on the impulse of the moment he seized the child and threw him in. The dog, instead of rushing to the rescue, as according to all authorities he should have done, sat upon the bank as unconcerned as an old bachelor at a wedding, and no urging could make him play the part that he was cast for in the little drama. The result was that the man, to save his child's life, had to plunge into the stream. It is worth taking quite a journey to hear him give his opinion of the life saving qualities of a Newfoundland dog.-Cambridge (N. Y.)

spectacle as awe inspiring as a total eclipse has its humorous side. At Berlin, the sun rose eclipsed, and eclipse trains were organized to enable the people in the vicinity to behold the phenomenon. The sky, however, at the time, was covered with impenetrable clouds, and the occupants of the eclipse trains were greatly disappointed. A countryman in the suburbs of Berlin hastened to put up a placard announcing that, on account of the bad weather, the eclipse would be put off until Sunday.

The governor of Moscow, knowing the ignorance of the people over whom he held sway, issued the following circular, which was distributed through the whole province: "The moujiks must not be frightened if, a few moments after the eclipse, they see falling from the sky a round mass supporting men. This mass, called a balloon, has been made use of for carrying astronomers high enough in the air to enable them to study the eclipse without being prevented by the clouds."-Scientific American.

A Hint to the Church.

No one who has passed along the streets of a city after night can have failed to notice the difference between the inducements held out by the world and those held out by the church for the entertainment or profit of a spare hour. Club rooms send out their cheery glow, barrooms ring with beguiling music. Only the church door is closed, or if perchance it is prayer meeting night and the door be open, it is too often to be sought down side street or along some gloomy passageway. Is it not time that the church began to compete legitimately with the world as to latter day methods of winning and holding the young or the stranger! - Chicago Standard.

CONDITION OF IRELAND.

Pictures of the Bridewell at Mitchellstown, Lately Made Famous.

The dumb war continues in Ireland, the tenents passively resisting, the landlords urging on the government to more stringent measures, the Torics defending coercion, the Whigs or Liberals denouncing it furiously and gaining with the English people, as recent elections show. A "dumb war" is what the Parnellites intended-that the peasantry should make only a moral resistance by mass meetings to protest, and small gatherings at each eviction to denounce the act. But among an excitable and angry people such a programme cannot be completely followed, and every now and then there is a serious fight. Such was the recent affray at Mitchellstown, when the police scattered the crowd. were attacked in turn and shot several of their assailants. The corener's inquest has resulted in a verdict of murder against the police; but as the authorities sustain them we may concede that the matter has two

Mr. O'Brien was returned to Mitchellstown to be tried before the resident magistrates for alleged seditious utterances in his speech there last August, the allegation being that he urged the people on Lady Kingston's estate to resist the sheriffs and bailiffs. Mr. O'Brien was taken to Mitchellstown by a roundabout road, under a strong guard, to prevent any demonstration; nevertheless, a large crowd followed him to the court room, and a deputation of ladies presented him a basket of flowers. Besides many prominent gentlemen and ladies of Ireland and England, there were also present several Americans, including Judge Foster, of Iowa; Rev. Father O'Leary, of St. Louis, and Mrs. Foster, a lady lawyer, of Clinton, Ia. Mr. O'Brien was convicted and sentenced to six months' imprisonment, but goes free on his own recognizance pending an appeal. While he was in jail at Cork there was a great popular demonstration, and a little later a riot at Fermov in which many were hurt, but no one killed. The views we present show that the jail at Mitchellstown is a secure but decidedly placiny place of residence for a gentleman used to good living.

"I suppose we have had the greatest trip that ever a dramatic company had," remarked a manager the other evening. "We have been within 400 miles of Aleska. In half of the places we did not have any theatre to play in. At Spokane Falls they built a theatre for us in twenty-four hours. Fact, They wanted us to show there and we were willing, but they did not even have a skating rink that they could fit up. But they said that if we would come they would have a place for us, and they did. They crected a pavilion out of rough pine boards and placed a canvas top over it. The place was packed. Cowboys came in droves like the cattle they take care of. I remember one fellow who could not get a seat. He kicked for a while and then went out and got a box. Whenever he would get in any one's way he would move. The people out there went crazy over the show, and the ballet girls used to get about four offers of marriage at each town. "But it was at Anaconda, in Montana, that we had the greatest experience that the show ever had. We made arrangements to play at the Grand Opera house. When we got there I saw the most dilapidated old barn that ever was. A good able bodied zephyr would have blown it into the middle of next week. The stage was on trestles, and every time any one placed his foot on it the whole building shook. There was no curtain and not a dressing room. Just think of that for a place to present our show in. That was the Grand Opera house. There was not a man in the town that could play a musical instrument. The natives had never heard of an orchestra. We only had a few hours to prepare for the show. We built our own dressing rooms, patched up some musliff for a curtain, hunted up an old piano, and then started in. The man who plays Count Fortune would speak a few lines and then put on his trousers and go down and play for the ballet. We had about a dozen men under the stage bracing it up with their backs, That is how we gave the show, and the people thought that it was the greatest thing on earth. - Minneapolis Journal.

Actress and Shortstop.

The sudden marriage of John M. Ward, short stop for the New York baseball team, and Helen Dauvray, the favorite actress, was a matter of surprise to every one. Helen Dauvray has always taken an interest in baseball, and offered a prize of a $500 cup to the winning team. Her real name before the present marriage was Gibson, and she made her first bow in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as Eva when but 5 years old. She will be remembered by many as "Little Nell, the California Diamond." She went abroad and passed seven years in Paris, and made her debut there on the stage of the Folies Dramatiques. She came back to America in 1883, and in two seasons she produced "One of Our Girls," "Met by Chance," "The Love Chase," "Peg Woffington," and "A Scrap of Paper". Her first husband was Herbert Tracy, a dramatio author. She was divorced from him.

BRIDE AND GROOM.

John Montgomery Ward was formerly captain of the New York club. He was born in Pennsylvania and became a professional baseball player in 1877. He is a graduate of Columbia College Law school, and he will probably settle down to practice in New York. Miss Dauvray has been in ill health for some time, so much so that she was obliged to retire from the stage. The hopes to regain her health in California, where the happy couple will go.
