MEDICINES.

"It Saved My Life"

Is a common expression, often heard from those who save realized, by personal use, the curative powers of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, "I can not say enough in praise of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, believing as I do that, but for its use, I should long since have died from lung troubles. -E. Bragdon, Palestine, Tex.

HOUSEHOLD DECORATIONS.

The wood of the California sycamore has lately come into extreme favor in cabinet work of all sorts.

Hungarian embroidery in prismatic effects, showing all the hues of the rainbow, is the latest thing in hangings.

Wrought iron has entirely superseded brass for articles of household use, in which an artistic appearance is desired. There is a very silly craze just now for white and gilt furniture. It looks well only in rooms specially decorated to receive it. Handsome lamps take the place of gas entirely in the "show" rooms of handsome houses. They necessitate an extra housemaid. So called India chairs are popular; they are made of natural bamboo, the pieces tied together with thongs of leather and draped with rough and very bright colored fabrics. The whilom craze for Japanese decorations has rather died out, but a bedroom or boudoir furnished and ornamented entirely in the Japanese fashion is always a thing of

The best of all interior decorations is an open wood fire, but do not be led into the folly of using one of the hideous gas imitations. The humble, unpretentious register is far better.

Thin screens of wood cut into intricate arabesques are now often applied to the upper part of the universal square door and window frames, thus giving them any curved outline The "heirloom business" is not so flourishing as it was, and "ancestral" clocks and spinning wheels, purchased at four or five times their worth, are relegated once more to attics and storerooms, Veneers of the various hard woods are now made, and can readily be applied over the painted woodwork of an ordinary room so as to give it the rich appearance always associated with "hard wood finish." The rage for balsam twigs has died out, and frowsy, disreputable, evil smelling cushions stuffed with dead balsam and decorated with such legends as "A Woodland Dream" no longer disfigure our drawing rooms. Sash curtains of rich but thin materials suspended from a slight end at the top of the window frame answer all the purposes of the ordinary roller shade, and are much prettier to look at either from within or without. If you can find in your garret or lumber room an old fashioned mahogany chest of drawers rejoice and be glad. Polished and finished off with much brass, they are now taking the place of the regulation buffets in fashionable dining rooms.

THE YOUNG FOLKS.

A little Byfield girl 2 years old went with her aunt to see a baby, and when she came home exclaimed: "Oh, mamma, the baby cried until it bent its face all over."-Newburyport News.

Mother (to 2-year-old)-If your dolly has been so naughty as you say, Flossie, why don't you give her a good whipping! Flossie (thoughtfully)-'Cause I don't believe in that sort of thing. - Philadelphia North American.

Street scene: Three small boys, one manipulating a long stick of molasses candy by inserting it into his œsophagus and bringing it to view again. Second Small Boy-"Say, Johnny, give me a piece." "Naw, I won't, coz you axed me." Third Small Boy-"Say, Johnny, I didn't ax ye." "Well, I seed you didn't want any."-Providence Journal.

A little 4-year-old chubby faced boy sat clenching his fingers around a silver dollar at the Sunday school service at the Methodist Episcopal church in Tyrone, Pa., on Sunday, and later reluctantly surrendered it to a person who collected the contributions to the church fund, saying afterward: "I didn't want to give it to Mr. B-; I wanted to give it to the Lord."-Exchange.

Little Mabel, 5 years old, is not so young but that she has picked up some knowledge of the ways of the world. She said to her mother the other day after a fit of deep musing: "Say, mamma, who was papa before he married us, anyway?" "Who was papa? Why, he was the same man that he is now." "Yes; but what was he to you? Was he just a man that you mashed?"-Alton (Ills.) Dem-

A small boy was given a toy gun in the use of which beans served as ammunition. The little fellow was tremendously excited over the toy, and came in one morning from the yard, where he had been firing it, exclaiming excitedly: "I shot a bean right up through God's house, and I think I hit him.' The earnestness of the little lad showed how unconscious he was of any sound of irreverence in his words.-Providence Journal.

Jamie's mother took him to a Christian convention and he was so much impressed that he was a very good boy for several days after. One day he was very restless and had to be corrected several times. After his mamma had talked with him seriously for some naughty action he exclaimed: "I guess you'll have to take me to another convention; won't you, mamma?"-Youth's Companion.

MEN OF THE PAST.

Samuel Drew, the English essayist, rose from a cobbler's bench.

Douglas Jerrold characterized dogmatism as being puppyism full grown.

James Howell, the English author, wrote his familiar letters in the Fleet prison. Thorwaldsen, the great Danish sculptor, was the son of a humble Icelandic fisherman. It is said that George the Third, of England, although deficient in education, never forgot a name once heard or a face he had ence seen.

The epitaph of Thomas Jefferson, written by himself, and inscribed on his monument, is as follows: "The author of the Declaration of Independence; of the Statute of Virginia for Religious Freedom; and Father of the University of Virginia."

Mozart, when only 13 years old, played a new opera from one hearing, which had been composed expressly to test his skill. writer, referring to the incident, says: "He not only reproduced the opera from memory -which was a very difficult piece-without missing a single note, but on a second playing threw in variations in such a manner that all who heard him were speechless with astonishment."

Brilliant Results.

The breath of a chronic catarrh patient is often so offensive that he cannot go into society and he becomes an object of disgust. After a time ulceration sets in, the spongy bones are attacked, and frequently entirely destroyed. A constant source of discomfort is the dripping of the purulent secretions into the throat, sometimes producing inve terate bronchitis, which in its turn has been the exciting cause of pulmonary disease. The brilliant results which have attended its use for years past properly designate Ely's Cream Balm as by far the best, if not the only real care for hay fever, rose cold and catarrh.

Try And Be Cured.

Lame back and nervous debility, associated with rheumatism, is sometimes met with in every day life, but as a rule we find not more than two of these complaints in the same party. Be this as it may.
