HARRIS DIED IN THE ANGLO-AMERI-CAN OF NATURAL CAUSES.

His Sufferings Must linve Been Intense-He Was, the Doctor Suss, Ill for Several Days-What is to He Done With the Body ?- It is at the Disposition of the Coroner,

The adjourned enquiry touching the death of Thomas Harris, a stranger, who died sit. Disgust. suddenly in the Anglo-American hotel on Sunday, was resumed in the police court room last evening. Coronor Saunders pre-

Dr. Irwin, who made the post-mortem examination, found no marks of violence upon the body, except a slight abrasion upon the nose and scar upon the forehead, which had likely been caused by deceased falling upon the floor. He found his heart healthy, the right lung small, and the liver very much enlarged. Inflammation of the bowels was undoubtedly the cause of death. Deceased must have sick for several days. There were no signs of poison in the body. The deceased had been affected by pleurisy at some period in his life. The doctor did not think that he had received any foul play previous to death, and concluded that his sickness had been caused by cold and ex-

Michael O'Neil, porter of the Anglo-American hotel, gave a detail of the deceased's actions after he reached the hotel on Sunday morning. He said that at 2:30 | The Opinions of Many Base-ball Enthusi-Harris came into the office in company with three other persons. He did not show any signs of sickness. He asked for a drink of liquor and said he was sick for want of it. The men were given a book in which to register their names. O'Neil asked them if they desired to room together. Harris replied in the negative and asked to be placed in a room by himself. His requestwas granted, and his companions were located in another room. While O'Neil was absent looking after rooms Harris asked the clerk to show him to an unoccupied room, which was done. He stopped in the apartment about five minutes, and on leaving it met O'Neil. He again applied for a drink, but was told that he could not buy a drink in the hotel on Sunday for $100. He replied by saying, "My God!" My God!" When told to go up stairs to the room prepared for him he anxiously in juired if there was lots of water in it. He was told there was, and when he got to his room he pleaded once more for a drink. On being refused he said he would try and do without one until daylight. He gave O'Neil $5 to pay for his lodging, and was given back $4.75. When asked if he wished to be called in the morning he said he didn't. He intended stopping several days in Kingston. After O'Neil left he locked the door.

William Blythe was the man who crawled through the transom of deceased's room on Sunday afternoon about 5 o'clock. Blythe tound deceased lying on the floor, facedownward, his head pointing towards the door. He was breathing, but could not speak, and shortly after Blythe's arrival died.

The coroner charged the jury and said that all it could do then was to render a verdict to the effect that deceased came to his death by natural causes. While at present there was no clue as to the man's iden tity, information might probably be got at a later period. He would try to ascertain it he had any friends.

The jury discussed the question as to whether the deceased should have been given liquor when he called for it. They learned by the statute that, being a boarder in the hotel, he could have been given liquor legally. They returned the verdict advised by the coronor.

Chief Horsey thought it would be a good idea to have the body photographed so that -Harris' friends would be able to identify it. The coroner favored the suggestion, but as there were no funds for such a purpose the work could not be done. The coroner said deceased had a pocket book containing $9.75 and other trinkets, which had been found on the body, and it he would surrender to persons claiming it. On the pocket book was marked "Nicholas Hodgins, news agent on the C P.R." The disposition of the body is in the control of the coroner. He will, no doubt, order it to be buried immediately. Up to last evening it was at the hotel.

HOW TO GET REDRESS?

The Council Want to Find Out Who Control the Street Railway Line.

At the council meeting last evening a letter was read from the city solicitor stating that "if Lieut. Ogilvie ever had a claim against the city, for an injury on the street by reason of non-repair, it is now barred by lapse of time. With regard to the steps to be taken 'to secure the city's interest, in view of the company being unable to pay any judgment recovered against it,' I am not sure that I understand what is meant. suppose the city is only concerned in any judgment it may, itself, obtain against the company, and that other judgment creditors are supposed to take such steps upon their judgments as may seem proper to them. If the company is insolvent it may be proceeded against under the Winding up act. The repairs done by the city have not been paid and I have not sued for the same as a suit against the company would, I think, be unproductive of anything but costs. I have not yet been able to get sufficient information to enable me to attempt to make any one else liable, but hope in time to do so. It is very inconvenient that the company should be in the position it is in and necessary information is hard to get. The council will remember that in September, 1883, a suit was brought against the company by the city for an injunction to compel the company to do the necessary repairs or remove the rails, but after the case was ready to, be heard the council stayed proceedings.

Alds. McIntyre and Thompson were anxious to find out who was responsible for the condition of the railway, and a motion was passed asking the solicitor to report "as to what redress the city may have against the street railway company if it persist in allowing the track to remain out of repair."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The Writings of Mr. Harvey.

KINGSTON, Nov. 14 .- (To the Editor) : I notice in your Saturday's paper an extraordinary production from the pen of one E. G. Colebrook Harvey. This youth seems anxious to advertise his familiarity with the "frail sisterhood." The Macedonian cry to his ears comes from a "brothel," whither he goes "prepared to remain." In the interest of decency pray let him stay in silent retreat. His experiences are not elevating and his words of advice not valuable. "Upon his brow shame is ashamed to

Who is He Anyway?

KINGSTON, Nov. 14. - (To the Editor) In the name of common sense who is E. G. Colebrook Harvey? Where did he come from and what is his occupation? I have read several of his productions and find that they are all indicative of a mind much given to morbid meditation. He and high society have had a serious falling out, I should say, and probably society thinks no more of him than he thinks of it. His language is certainly somewhat mysterious-concealing as much as expressing his thoughts-and his experience is the same whetherhe writes poetry or prose. It may be that he does not intend to call people bad names, but it is the opinion of most people that he is trying to do so, and if ever they take to retaliating it won't be well for E. G. Colebrook Harvey. -- AUNT SUSEY.

asts-R. J. Eilbeck's the Best. The Belleville Ontario has a column of opinions as to the formation of a Canadian base-ball league. Among those interviewed is R. J. Eilbeck, of Kingston, who goes in for either a purely Canadian league, including Montreal, Ottawa, Kingston, Belleville, Guelph, St. Thomas and St. Catharines, or an Eastern International league, including Belleville, Kingston, Ottawa, Montreal, Oswego, Watertown, Rome, Troy, or Albany. "My idea," he writes, "is to stick to Canada; by so doing we can make satisfactory arrangements with the railroads and secure a lc. per mile rate, salary limit, hotel rates and many other things which usually eat up the receipts. Kingston is willing to go in."

The editor says that of all the opinions given that of Mr. Eilbeck for an Eastern league is most feasible. The Western cities are either too large or too wealthy to give | the rest a fair show for the pennant, or else they have got over the base-ball boom which in the east has only set in strongly. London, Hamilton and Toronto would be able to pay salaries much larger than other managers dare give, and the salary limit would probably be a farce.

M'LLE RHEA'S PERFORMANCE

Something About "Fairy Fingers" - Her Griginal Creation of "Camille"

On Thursday, Nov. 17th, M'lle Rhea will appear at the opera house in a matinee and evening performances presenting two of her greatest characters. M'lle Rhea has established herself as a prime favorite and a warm welcome awaits her.

At the special matinee on Thursday afternoon M'lle Rhea will present her latest suc cess entitled "Fairy Fingers." It was written originally for the Theatre Francais of which house it remains a standard work. She first produced the play at Rouen and achieved a wonderful success in it. It upholds the dignity of labour and shows how a young girl can by her own exertions raise herself above the need of aid from others. It gives scope for a bewildering display of gorgeous dresses. Among those displayed by M'lle Rhea will be one worn by Madeline Brohan on the first presentation of the play in France. On Thursday evening M'lle Rhea will appear as "Camille." She will use the version played in France and preserves many of the beauties eliminated by former translations.

CLARK DID NOT SHOW UP-

He Did Not Face the Music-The Challenge Not Yet Accepted.

Some time ago a foot race, a quarter of a mile, was contested by Dr. Shaw, of Mallory town, and Mr. Clark, of Brock ville. The latter won. Dr. Shaw's race is a mile, and not a quarter, and he, therefore, would not have run against Clark had Clark not promised to run that distance against him at a later date. In the meantime the following challenge was inserted in a Brockville paper: "I understand that an individual named Clark wishes to gain fame and notoriety by distinguishing himself as an amateur on the cinderpath. He can do so and at the same time make $100 by beating the record made by Dr. Shaw for one mile. Should Clark beat the record he can be accommodated for any distance over one mile and for any sum over $100 or $500." Clark accepted the challenge and the mile race was set for Saturday, 12th instant. But on the morning of that day Clark being afraid o face the music left suddenly, his friends tay for Toronto.

MAY GET A BLACK EYE.

SENSATIONS AT THE COUNCIL-BOTH FUN AND FIGHT.

Ald. Snowden Makes the Aldermen Laugh But Ald. C. Robinson Make Them Very Solemn-The Council not the Place to Air One's Ignorance -I'm-Not-Afraid Style of Ald. McIntyre.

It's a poor council meeting that doesn't furnish one or two sensations. Now last night it did seem as though things were to be awfully tame, but after the calm, that lasted for nearly an hour, came the storm. Ald, Snowden, after a fusilade of befuddled remarks, got up to give his opinion upon the payment of a portion of the expenses of the railway deputation to Ottawa. He was strangling the English language when Ald. William Robinson made a ball of paper, threw it at his neighbor and caught him near the mouth. Instantly the member for Rideau ward turned on Ald. Shannon and threatened to give him a black eye if he "tried that on again." Amid the laughter of the aldermen Ald. Snowden insisted that he could "lick" any man about the board, and again turning to the innocent young man for Victoria ward, and pointing his tinger at him exclaimed, "And don't you forget that

This was very interesting, but that which followed was considered "tight," and a hush fell upon the members.

Ald. Wilmot got up to say that he was favorable to the city's portion of the expense being paid, as thousands of dollars and valuable lives would be saved by the changes to be made alone at Tete du Pont barracks. Ald. C. Robinson-"That could be done without going to Ottawa."

Ald. McIntyre-"That shows that you know nothing about it. You shouldn't air your ignorance like that here."

Now human nature could not stand such a shock, and Ald. C. Robinson was up in a moment and glaring into his colleague's face. In the confusion Ald. C. Robinson's speech could not be caught, but he was understood to resent the "insult" in a most awful way. He said several times, "There's nothing in it."

Then there was another calm for a season, and Ald. Robinson wanted Ald. McIntyre to know that he must use proper language while sitting beside him.

Ald. McIntyre-"Oh ho! Then I suppose I'm in danger of getting my eye blacked!" And he shook his handsome head as much as to say, "I'm not a slugger, but I'm not afraid." He said Ald. Robinson was too "touchy;" that he (McI.) had simply used the language in respect to one thing on which Ald. Robinson was ignorant. He did not impute that Ald. Robinson was more ignorant than any of his colleagues.

Ald. Robinson's final remark was that the language of Ald. McIntyre was "a little too

In five minutes afterwards peace was declared, and the aldermen were chatting pleasantly.

The matter of paying a portion of the expenses of the deputation was brought up by Ald. Thompson, who questioned the right of the city to pay for anything it did not order. He was satisfied when Ald. McIntyre pointed out that the gentlemen had no intention of being disrespectful, but the date of the meeting of the railway committee was so quickly made that consultation could not be had with the council.

But other aldermen were not satisfied, and they said so. They did not think they should do anything because the county council had acted niggardly. Alds. Harty, McIntyre, Thompson and others thought the city should not be guided by the county's action. Ald. McIntyre characterized the conduct of that body as most unreasonable. He was glad to see that the Whie, in its editorial, handled the county council without gloves. It was do ing quite right, for that council had probably strangled a most desirable work that would benefit all classes of the community. The expense was small, and smaller than it probably would have been, for if the city council had been applied to it would have probably sent a delegation along. The grant of $25 was sustained on a divi sion, Alds. C. Robinson and Snowden alone opposing.
