MOLLY POOLE'S DEATH.

A Case Will Probably be Revived-"Doc" Davis Gets a Commutation.

Toronto News. The case of the notorious Doc Davis, of Jenny Gilmore tame, though disposed of many years ago, is still fresh in the minds and memories of the citizens of Toronto in all its revolting details. It may, however, be of interest to those who were familiar with his trial to learn that Davis has had his sentence commuted from life imprison ment in the Kingston penitentiary to a term of fifteen years. This will leave him a free man once more in 1889, that is to say, if all things go well and he does not strike a snag. The commutation was granted by the minister of justice, Hon. Mr. Thompson, through the efforts of Mrs. Davis, backed up by Senator Sullivan, Warden Lavell and several prominent clergymen.

Warden Lavell is now engaged in trying to secure for Davis the good conduct commutation allowed prisoners in for stated terms. If he be successful Davis will get out next month, but if he does it is just possible that he may find the gates of the penitentiary once more between him and

A few weeks before Davis got arrested for the Gilmore business a girl named Molly Poole, a farmer's daughter in Simcoe, applied to him for assistance in her trouble He performed an operation, from the result of which the young woman died three days after the termination of his trial. The family of the Poole girl found out the cause of her death in the interval between the arrest and the sentencing of the doctor, but did not take any steps to punish him, as they thought as he had been sent to the gallows that was punishment enough, and would save exposure. The same reasons prevailed when the reprieve came up from Ottawa, and instead of being hanged he was given imprisonment for lite. Now, however, that he has had his time cut down to fifteen years they propose to wait for him at the gate and again put him on trial for Doe Davis is not employed in the tailoring department, as has been stated, but has charge of the changing room where prisoners doff their outside suits when they enter the penitentiary, and don them again when they go out. It is said that Doc Davis secured the favor of the department of justice by acting the part of a stool pigeon or spy on the other convicts, and it is for services in this connection that he has been the recipient of clemency.

Dr. Lavell was to-day spoken to and said that he knew nothing of the early release of the convict. Some time ago the minister of justice limited "Doc." Davis' sentence to 20 years, that being the average period served by life convicts in England, and it is possible that the usual reduction of servitude will follow on account of good conduct. Dr. Lavell says he did not specially interest himself in the commutation of Davis' sen tence, and has confined himself to such correspondence as the department of justice called for. If the convict's sentence has been further reduced to fifteen years the warden has not been notified of it. He says Davis has for years made himself very useful in the prison. He has familiarized himself with the details of the changing room, and has performed duties that, in his absence, would have to be taken by an officer. If the government shows him any consideration it will be on the ground of his willing and efficient service, not for the espionage of other convicts he is alleged to have indulged in. Dr. Lavell, in taking office, declared that he would have no pets, no spies, and he has on no oceasion veered from this purpose.

REGRETTING SUCH CONDUCT.

Ministers Enter an Objection to a Circumstance And Tender Advice.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted at the last meeting of the evangelical alliance of this city: "Resolved, that this alliance feels constrained to express and place on record its profound regret that the directors of the Midland Central fair should have seen fit to permit, on the grounds under their control, the exhibitors of gambling artifices, fakirs, thimble riggers, etc., to ply their illegitimate and demoralizing trade at the last annual exposition, much to the annoyance and grief of many citizens who were in attendance. In thus recording its regret the alliance believes that it is in perfect harmony with the vast majority of the patrons of the fair both from town and country. And the alliance further believes that general satisfaction will be felt if the new management rigidly excludes from the new grounds all such unscrupulous players on human inexperience and folly; and if greater vigilance were exercised to prevent the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors."

ARE WOMEN JEALOUS?

ELLA WHEELER SAYS IF THEY ARE. IT'S THE FAULT OF MEN.

Envy and Jealousy-Love Begets Jealousy -Different Types of Women Who Are Never Susceptible to Jealous Feelings -Women Made to be Loved, Petted, Appreciated by Man.

Very few people make a proper distinction between jealousy and envy. They are used as synonymous terms, and confounded every day by able speakers and writers. Yet they are as unlike as a wild animal and an Jealousy is often the misbehaved child of noble parentage. Envy is always base born and plebeian. Jealousy often suffers untold agonies in silence, or strikes bold blows in the face. Envy stabs in the darkness and behind the back. Jealousy to be, must first look in the face of Love. Envy can exist without ever having looked beyond its own reflection. Jealousy must spring from self-depreciation; eavy must spring from self adulation.

I heard it once remarked of a worldly belle who courted admiration, but laughed at love, that she was a strange paradox; she could not love, yet she exhibited intense jealousy if any of her numerous admirers bestowed the least attention to any other ladies. This was but another illustration of the misuse of the word. The selfish belle had never known love, therefore she could not know jealousy. She was simply envi-ous of the power which any woman possessed to draw her admirers from her side. She desired to be a monopolist in the affairs of the heart, a Jay Gouldess in the affectional market, and she resented the interference of any small dealer or dabbler in the stock

Men exhibit this sort of feeling to a degree, though their broad and busy lives prevent them from carrying it to the extent which mars the progress of woman every-

I have heard physicians of excellent standing decry each other with rancor; musicians are notoriously envious to one another; authors, actors, and even business men often forget that the world is large enough for all, and that success was never obtained by pulling down another

But this feeling which takes root in self and directs its venom toward other people's achievements and possessions is not jealousy. It is only foolish envy, the meanest attribute of the human mind; the little fox which spoils the vine, the rat which undermines the wall of a noble character, the moth which destroys the beautiful fabric of the soul. It is the child of selfishness and the companion of hate. Jealousy is the unworthy child of Love, a bad child, who ought to be governed and chastised before he works harm to his parent.

Love may exist without jealousy, as a man may live without offspring. But jeal ousy cannot live without Love any more than an infant can be born without parents. As the rule of the world is that people beget offspring, so it is the rule that Love begets jealousy.

If women are more jealous then men, it is only because they live more wholly in the atmosphere of Love. There are two rare types of woman who are never susceptible to jealousy. One is the perfectly humble being, utterly devoid of individuality, who lives in a state of wondering amazement that she should be the recipient of her lover's least regard. She is grateful for a smile, and overwhelmed at a word of praise. She finds greater joy in loving than in being loved, and is a faint echo of the masculine mind in all her opinions and ideas. She is willing to be the mat beneath his feet, to eat the crumbs which fall from his table, to do-his most menial labor. She has the nature of a serf, the devotion of a dog, and if he neglects her for other women (as he usually does) she never complains, as in his will she finds her own pleasure. Her nature is mild, patient, and constant, and devoid of passion and intensity. . The other type of woman who knows no jealousy is quite her opposite. She is a radiant happy creature, full of self-confidence, egotism, and satisfaction. She is pleased with life and with herself. She loves deeply, and demands as much as she gives. She expects to be told every day that she is the most adorable woman on earth, and she is sure to convince a man of the fact. It never enters her happy head that another woman could be as charming as herself, or that she could never be displaced in the affections of any man she loves. She is a woman who has been accustomed to love and admiration all her life, and she knows how to keep her lover interested and amused. She is sure that he finds other women dull in comparison with herself, and she lends him freely to her friends, certain that he will return giadly to her.

The majority of women who lead a monotonous existence live in their imaginations, and grow morbidly sensitive. Many a man ruins the peace of his house hold forever by neglecting to speak the word of praise which his hungry-hearted wife has yearned al! day to hear, and bestowing it upon some chance caller or stranger. The man who fails to notice the careful toilet his wife has made for his sake, and compliments the good taste in dress exhibited by some neighbor, sows the seed of jealousy in a dissappointed heart. Woman was made to be loved, petted and appreciated by man. Whatever else she may achieve in life, she feels herself cheated out of her birthright unless this happiness has come to her. She is jealous of whatever and whoever may stand between her and that desired joy. I have known two mothers who were jealous of their own children. Unnatural and terrible as this may seem, I felt the greatest sympathy for both women. In each case the husband utterly ignored the wife for her offspring. She was a secondary consideration, neglected and rebuked where the children were caressed and appreciated. I heard a woman who was a grandmother remark one day that she would never have lived with her husband an hour if he had once told her that he thought another woman beautiful or interesting. Poor man! of course such thoughts had entered his mind, and with what secreey he must have guarded them all those years !

Jealousy of such a petty type as hers is surely the dwarfed and imbecile child of its parent. The woman whose life is full of sensible and noble duties is less given to unreasonable jealousy than the idler who dwells in a world of her own imagining.

And the woman who receives the love and devotion which is her birthright seldom feels the pangs of jealousy. ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

COMMERCIAL UNION.

The Settlement of All Disputes between Canada and the United States.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.-The chamber of commerce has adopted resolutions on the subject of commercial union with Canada and the adjustment of the fishery question. The chamber desires all differences between the two countries to be settled on an enduring basis of mutual interest. It appears to the chamber both reasonable and equitable that American fishing vessels should be accorded the same privileges in Canadian ports that Canadian vessels are accorded in American ports, and it would welcome any arrangement for enlarged commercial relations between Canada and the United States which would seem fair to the contracting parties and contribute to the settlement of the question now under consideration.

MR. LABOUGHERE'S MANIFESTO.

It is Against the Irish Landlords-They're Landsharks of the Meanest Kind. LONDON, Dec. 3. - Mr. Labouchere, leader of the radicals in parliament, speaking at Battle, delivered a manifesto against the Irish landlords. He said that the Irish people are not thieves but victims of thieves. The landlords have almost ruined the country, and are proved by the land courts to be spoliators and landsharks of the basest kind. He said that to call the denial of the right of landlords to excessive rents an attack on property was precisely what the slave owners in America said of the abolition of slavery, and what every petty tyrant LONDON, Dec. 2.-Mr. Bradlaugh, when cross-examined in the police court in the Graham case, was asked by counsel for the government whether he remembered the meeting in Trafalgar square, in 1885, which resulted in a detachment of the crowd looting the shops. Mr Bradlaugh replied: "Yes, the meeting was got up and paid for by Lord Salisbury. I have seen the cheque. Lord Salisbury says: "The statement that I ever provided money or ever had any connection with any meeting in the square, is absolutely unfounded."

Facts Worth Knowing.

In all diseases of the nasal mucous mem brane the remedy used must be non-irritating. The medical profession has been slow to learn this. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders, syringes, astringents, or any similar application, because they are all irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as worse than failures. A multitude of persons who have for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict, testify to radical and permanent cures wrought by Ely's Cream Balm.
