THE CURIOSITY SHOP.

Charles Dickens' Grandmother - The Source of the Novelist's Gift for Story. Mr. T. Wemyss Reid writes in The London Daily News of the grandmother of Charles Dickens, repeating what was told him long ago by the first Lady Houghton. "Old Mrs. Dickens," he says, "was not nurse but housekeeper at Crewe in the time of the first Lord Crewe, the grandfather of the present holder of the title, and of his sister, the first Lady Houghton, I well remember Lady Houghton speaking to me with enthusiasm of Mrs. Dickens' wonderful powers as a story teller. It was her delight as child to listen to the tales which the old lady was able to relate with so much dramatic force and feeling; and it was with the greatest interest that, later in life, Lady Houghton recognized in the illustrious author of 'David Copperfield' the grandson of the favorite of her childhood. Old Mrs. Dickens had one grievance which Lady Houghton still recalled when she told me about her. It was the conduct of her son John-Charles' father-against whose idloness and general incapacity she was never tired of inveighing. There have been many conjectures as to the source from which Dickens derived his wonderful gift as a story teller. It is hardly a far fetched tancy to suppose that he inherited his special gift from the old housekeeper at Crewe,"

Suez Canal Statistics.

The number of vessels which have passed through the Sucz canal since it was opened in December, 1869, up to 1885 was 30,621. Of this number 1,513 were men of war, 22,009 were freight steamers, 5,396 were mail boats, 128 were yachts and 289 were sailing vessels. One million four hundred and fifty-eight thousand six hundred and seventeen passengers have passed through the canal in the sixteen years in which it has been opened. Among these were 166,522 pilgrims to Mec-a, 6,864 Russian convicts, 5,505 Siberian colonists, 640 Chinese coolies. There were also 812,000 soldiers and 394,465 general travelers. The receipts of the canal for the entire period of service are 14,970 704 francs. Vessels of 2,000 tonnage readily pass through the canal, while 4,000 tonnage vessels experience no unusual difficulty in making the passage. The largest (broadest) vessel which passed through the Suez canal was the iron ctad Agamemnon, which has a beam of sixty-six feet, and made the passage in 1885 in 147

An Old Couplet.

The couplet For he that fights and runs away May live to fight another day, will be found in Goldsmith's "Art of Writing Poetry on a New Plan." Butler's "Hudibras," written about 100 years before Goldsmith's version, contains the following:

For those that fly may fight again, Which he can never do that's slain.

Ray's "History of the Rebellion" (1752) and Udall's translation of Erasmus (1442) express the same idea in almost the identical language of Goldsmith, allowing for the more primitive state of the language in Udall's time. . Ray gives it:

He that fights and run away May turn and fight another day. In Udall's translation from Erasmus the couplet is:

That same man that runneth awaie Maie again fight another daie.

The last is the earliest English expression of the thought, which can be traced to Tertullian, who lived in the Second century.

Hans Breitmann.

This is the nom de plume of Charles Godfrey Leland, but is now little used by its original bearer. Mr. Leland was born in Philadelphia, Aug. 15, 1824, and became a member of the bar of that city, May 6, 1851. Literature, rather than law, has proven his vocation, and to it he has for many years devoted his time. He is distinguished for his know!edge of the Romany tongue, being, it is said, the only American who has mastered the speech of that strange nomadic people, the gypsies. The diligent study of and acquired familiarity with the history and customs of this interesting people, which distinguished George Barrow in England, likewise distinguishes Charles Godfrey Leland, who is also widely known through his Indian researches, especially, for his works upon the language and legends of the Algonquins. Mr. Leland is at present residing abroad.

A Wedding Ring Motto.

The word Mizpah is of Hebrew origin, and, literally translated, means beacon, or watch tower. From this it has come to mean the memorial or reminder of a covenant. The earliest mention we have of this word in the Bible is when Laban, pursuing the fleeing Jabob, finds and becomes reconciled to him, and the heap of stones piled up by them both on Mount Gilead served a double purposeas witness to the covenant between these two and as landmark of the boundary between them. Laban called the place Mizpah; for, said he, the Lord watch between thee and me when we are absent from one another. The word Mizpah is frequently, in the signification thus expressed by Laban, engraved in engagement or wedding rings, both as a token of the covenant and as a prayer that the watch angels of God will hover over the beloved.

The Great London Fire.

It lasted four days, commencing Sept. 2, 1666. It broke out accidentally in a house near London bridge. A strong east wind caused it to spread with great rapidity, and thus London was given up to the flames, Two-thirds of the city was destroyed-eightynine churches, including St. Paul's cathedral, and more than 13,000 dwelling houses. One good result came from this fire-it purified the city and rid it of a plague that was far more fearful even than the fire. We are told in the "Dictionary of English History" that "the fever dens in which the plague lurked were burnt, and the new houses which were erected were far more healthy and better arranged."

An Old Saying.

"Necessity is the mother of invention." This is a very old aphorism, dating back over 200 years. Its origin is attributed to Franck's "Northern Memoirs," written in the year 1658. These memoirs, however, were not printed until 1694, and twenty-two years before the appearance of said publication (1672) the idea was expressed in Wycherly's "Love in a Wood," act iii, scene 3. George Farquhar also makes use of it in his "Twin Rivals," act i, produced in 1705,

A Charge Not Sustained.

It is claimed that Thomas Campbell plagiarized the line, "'Tis distance lends en-chantment to the view." The original interpretation from Dyer's "Grouger Hill" shows that the charge of plagiarism cannot be sustained.

As you summit, soft and fair, Clad in colors of the air, Which to those who journey near, Barren, brown and rough appear; Still, we tread the same coarse way. The present's still a cloudy day.

The Editor's Inspiration.

"Mr. Kajones," said the foreman of a southern Illinois paper, as he went into the presence of the editor the other day, "we've waited a day and a half for that blank paper and it hasn't come yet. If we don't go to press this afternoon we'll lose two stickfuls of legal ads that have got to be printed before to-morrow. What are we going to do?"

"Have we any blank paper at all?" inquired the editor. "We have ten quires of brown wrapping paper, such as butchers use." "Then," said the editor, as the fire of a sudden inspiration flashed from his eyes, "we'll use that." And he turned to his desk and wrote the following editorial, which he gave to the foreman, with instructions to double lead it and put it at the head of the first column on the editorial page: "Of all the papers in the United States The Welkin Ringer is the only one that has the enterprise to print a correct portrait of Queen Kapiolani, of the Sandwich Islands, which will be found in another column. The outlines of this portrait have been engraved with great care, and the cut is guaranteed to be an accurate popy of the latest photograph of her majesty; while in order to show her complexion as it really is, we have gone to the trouble and expense of printing our entire edition on paper whose color and quality exactly reproduce the complexion and texture of the skin of this now famous queen. Extra copies of this week's issue, wrapped ready for mailing, can be had at five cents each by applying at this office."-Chicago Tribune.

A Postmaster's Opinion.

"I have great pleasure in certifying to the usefulness of Hagyard's Yellow Oil," writes D. Kavanagh, postmaster, of Umfraville, Ont.; "having used it for soreness of the throat, burns, colds, etc., I find nothing equal to it."

Getting Into Prime Condition. "The best thing you can do is to make believe that you are a prize fighter in training, and govern your habits accordingly." This was the advice which I heard addressed, not to me (for I pride myself on retaining some youthfulness of figure), but to a club man here in Boston who, harding lived not wisely but too well, has acquired an unbecoming rotundity of person. I looked "to the subject, and I find that the advice was most admirable. A modern prize fighter trains on approved principles. He enjoys a variety of nourishing food and goes through a variety of ex weises. In the regimen, lately published, of two notorious figurers, I observed some very pleasant features: long pulls in a boat; walks, enlivened by an occasional run; an hour's vigorous exercise in punching a leather bag; an attendant to rub you down, as if you were a horse of value; plenty of beef, mutton, toast and tea; a quiet hour after dinner; billiards in the evening and a long night's rest. What a glorious state, not only of body, but of mind, such a system must induce. - Boston Post.

California's Biggest Orchard.

California has some big orchards, and the largest is in the Suisun vailey, and is owned by A. T. Hatch, president of the California Fruit union., Mr. Hatch has 200 acres in pear trees, 130 in peaches, 70 in apricots, 10 in nectarines, 210 in almonds, 40 in cherries, 100 in plums and prunes, besides 40 acres of currants and gooseberries, and hundreds of lemon and orange trees. Of these acres, 300 bore fruit this season to the amount of 2,000 tons, which brought the owner $100,000. He calculates that when the whole orchard is in full bearing it will produce 8,000 tons of fruit, worth $400,000 .- Chicago News.
