EVENING WITH LONGFELLOW.

Quantity of the Audience and Quality of the Entertainment Satisfactory.

The lecture room of the Queen St. Methodist church was filled last night with those desiring to spend a couple of hours with the most popular of American poets. The young ladies of the mission band who, for the furtherance of their schemes, had prepared the entertainment, are to be congratulated on their success. They were pleased with the quality of the audience, and the audience not less with the quality of the entertainment. After prayer by the Rev. Mr. Whiting, the chairman, Rev. W. Sparling, R.A., in a few happy remarks introduced a varied and excellent programme of recitations, singing and essays. A compact and interesting sketch of Longfellow's life and character, prepared by Mr. R. K. Rowe, owing to his unavoidable absence, was pleasingly read by Miss Anglin. For a similar reason Mr. J. L. Whiting's thoughtful and discriminating criticism of the poet's character and powers was read by Rev. S. G. Bland. Both papers were appreciated.

Miss Allen, who shows high promise of an elocutionist, recited "The Wreck of Hesperus," and "The Legend Beautiful," was sympathetically rendered by Miss L. Phillips. Two selections from "Hiawatha," "The Famine," and "The Wooing," were gracefully given respectively by Miss Purdy and by Miss Britton, whom her friends of old were glad to hear again, as also Dr. Herald who effectively recited "King Robert of Sicily," "The Bridge" and "The Rainy Day," came with their unchanging charm of pensive resignation from Miss Allan and Miss McCartney. In "The Open Window" Master Rockwell won marked appreciation, and Miss Orser in "The Day is Done," elicited an encore. The programme, which was well sustained, was fittingly closed by a quartette, "Good Night," from Messrs. Lifiton, Greenwood, Sparks and Binkley, with whom the public are glad to become increasingly familiar. The lecture room was appropriately adorned with notices from Longfellow's poems.

The Times says no president's message on record is more remarkable for a bold outspoken disclosure of novel policy, hitherto opposed or ignored by both political parties. It is still more remarkable that Mr. Cleveland has the courage to confront the serried phalanx of protectionists on the eve of a contest for the presidency. So far as England is concerned it is questionable, whatever the impulse resulting from the removal of the burdens on American industry, whether America will not confront us in formidable rivalry in both home and foreign markets. We have confidence, however, in the laws by which, when trade is free, every nation discovers its fittest work and turns its advantages to the best account.

English Opinions Expressed.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The Telegraph, referring to President Cleveland's argument condemning the wool tariff asks: "Is he sure that it is to the wool tariff alone that his argument applies?" It is certain that there are not large numbers, not perhaps, in the farming but in the wage-earning classes in America, who will lose more by the enhanced prices of necessities of life than they gain from an increase in wages by the protection of the industries in which they are employed? This is a question which free traders will ask and which American statesmen may hear addressed to them by their countrymen in a different tone.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The Standard says President Cleveland's message is based on financial principles the soundness of which it is impossible to successfully dispute. It marks the revolution starting point in the fiscal controversies of the United States. Whether it will bring about immediately a new departure in their fiscal policy depends upon its reception by congress, which may give a spirited protest to the president.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The Times' London despatch says Europe talks about the two presidents to-day and of very little else. The politicians and merchants are somewhat blue over the apparent prospect of the American tariff reductions. Word has been passed round during the last two years that the American free trade, so far from opening new markets for England, would most likely put her to desperate fighting to hold the markets she has got. Two years ago such a message as Mr. Cleveland's would have been received with great satisfaction. Now it rather frightens Englishmen as opening up something new and unpromising in the future.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 7.—Samuel P. Randall said last night there will be a reduction of taxation at this session of $66,000,000 or more, but not on the exact line of the president's suggestions, as contained in his message. A large part of this reduction will be in the repeal of internal taxes, which the president does not seem to favor, and a large reduction will also be made in the rates of duty on exports.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 7.—The annual report of the secretary of the treasury devotes much attention to the question of surplus revenue and a revision of the tariff. The conclusions and recommendations are the same as those contained in the president's message. The surplus in the treasury on Dec. 1st amounted to $55,258,701, and the secretary estimates that it will aggregate $140,000,000 on June 30th next.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 7.—The president to-day sent the following nominations to the senate:—Lucius Q. C. Lamar, of Mississippi, to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States; W. F. Vilas, of Wisconsin, to be secretary of the interior; Donald M. Dickinson, of Michigan, to be postmaster-general; Charles S. Fairchild, of New York, to be secretary of the treasury; George L. PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

IT HAS GREATED CRITICISM AT HOME AND ABROAD.

The English Press Endorses It—It is Declared to Be Based on Sound Reasoning—The Protectionists Very Much Displeased About It As They Were Expected to Be—The Surplus Revenue.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The Tribune says: "President Cleveland gives congress no information about the fishery question, the pending negotiations with Great Britain, or relations with the foreign powers. So absorbed is the president in pressing upon congress a particular and a distinctive partizan policy, in regard to the mode of reducing the revenue, that he finds no space for any reference to other grave questions, not of a partizan character, which call for congressional action. The president, not speaking for the whole people whose official representative he ought to be, has chosen to speak exclusively for one faction of one party and only on the chief issue between the parties. Credit is due to the president for making the issue boldly and distinctly, so that no man can hereafter claim with a show of reason that theories and aims of ultra opponents of protection have not in him a zealous advocate."

The Times says no president's message on record is more remarkable for a bold outspoken disclosure of novel policy, hitherto opposed or ignored by both political parties. It is still more remarkable that Mr. Cleveland has the courage to confront the serried phalanx of protectionists on the eve of a contest for the presidency. TALK ON TEMPERANCE.

Mr. Doughty and Rev. Mr. Sparling in the City Hall—Scott Act Enforcement.

The hall was comfortably filled last evening by people anxious to hear Mr. Doughty, the temperance lecturer. He ably presented the bright side of a life of temperance and depicted the misery and wretchedness, the offspring of drunkenness, which came under his observation. He spoke strongly regarding the relationship which the church bore to temperance, and asserted that temperance men would not be able to accomplish much towards stemming the tide of the liquor traffic if they did not seek the co-operation of the church. With its assistance they would be able to battle successfully against their well-armed enemy, strong drink. If prohibition was ever to be brought about, and he thought the day for this was a long way off, it would be through the instrumentality of the church.

Rev. Mr. Sparling said he was a prohibitionist out-and-out and believed in the Scott act even if it was not enforced as perfectly as it might be. It is probable that liquor is sold in districts where the Scott act is in force. Under the license system the law is violated also and unlicensed places are in full swing. He would also venture to say that not a Sunday passed in this fair city without liquor being sold. There were too many places licensed to sell the accursed drink. In Montreal there were 1,200; in Toronto, 150; and in Kingston, 66. He thought these figures were altogether too large. As far as the Scott act was concerned he wished it was in force in Kingston. It was too bad that this city should be situated in the centre of a district in which the Scott act was in force and still be able to supply them with strong drink. It was shameful to see leaving the city daily barrels of strong drink to be secretly sold in Scott act districts.

DIVORCE CASE ENQUIRY.

The Decision of Bishop Cleary in Regard to It—Award of Alimony.

CORNWALL, Dec. 6.—The Bishop of Kingston has been engaged here for some days in examining a matrimonial case which excites much interest. The lady petitioner claims divorce from her husband on the ground of injury done to her by his bad language
