ALLAN QUATERMAIN:

A FROWNING CITY.

BY H. RIDER HAGGARD, uthor of "King Solomon's Mines," "She," 'Dawn," etc. Published by the Rose Pub LISHING COMPANY, and for sale by all the Book-sellers. Copyrighted.

A gasp of wonder and astonishment rose from all those who witnessed the extraoudlaary sugar, and then some a sy cried, chattered as when alone!" and at once a murmuring areas.

"Av," said Nyleptha, with that quick wit which distinguishes her. "Ay, my people, he has shuttered the stone, and behold the prophecy is fulfilled, for a stranger king rules in Zu-Vendis. Incubu, my lord, hath beat Sorais back, and I fear her no more, and to him who hath saved the crown it shall surely be. And this man," she said, turning to me and laying her hand upon my shoulder, "wot ye that, though wounded in the fight of yesterday, he rode, with that old warrior who lies there, one hundred miles 'twixt sunset and rise to save me from the plots of cruel men. Ay, and he has saved me, by a very little, and, therefore, because of the deeds that they have done-deeds of glory such as our history cannot show the like-therefore I say that the name of Macumazahn and the name of dead Umslopogaas, ay, and the name of Kara, my servant, who aided him to hold the stair, shall be blazoned in letters of gold above my throne, and shall be glorious forever while the land endures. I, the Queen, have said it."

This spirited speech was met with loud cheering, and I said that after all we had only done our duty, as it is the fashion of both Englishmen and Zulus to do, and there was nothing to make an outery about; at which they cheered still more, and then I was supported across the outer courtyard to my old quarters, in order that I might be put to bed. As I went, my eyes lit upon the brave horse Daylight that lay there, his white head outstretched on the pavement, exactly as he had fallen on entering the yard; and I bade those who supported me take me near him, that I might look on the good beast once more before he was dragged away. And as I looked, to my astonishment he opened his eyes and, lifting his head a little, whinnied faintly. could have shouted for joy to find that he was not dead, only unfortunately I had not a shout left in me; but as it was, grooms were sent for and he was lifted up and wine poured down his throat, and in a fortnight he was as well and strong as ever, and is the pride and joy of all the people of Milosis, who, whenever they see him, point him out to the little children as the "horse which saved the White Queen's life."

Then I went on and got off to bed, and was washed and had my mail shirt removed. They hurt me a good deal in getting it off, and no wonder, for on my left breast and side was a black bruise the size of a saucer.

The next thing that I remember was the tramp of horsemen outside the palace wall some ten hours later. I raised myself and asked what was the news, and they told me that a large body of cavalry sent by Curtis to assist the Queen had arrived from the scene of the battle, which they had left two hours after sundown. When they left, the wreck of Sorais' army was in full retreat upon M'Arstuna, followed by all our effective cavalry. Sir Henry was encamping the remains of his worn-out forces on the site (such is the fortune of war) that Sorais had occupied the night before, and proposed marching on to M'Arstuna on the morrow. Having heard this, I felt that I could die with a light heart, and then everything became a blank. When next I awoke the first thing I saw was the round disc of a sympathetic eyeglass, behind which was Good. "How are you getting on old chap?" said a voice from the neighborhood of the eye-

"What are you doing here?" I asked faintly. "You ought to be at M'Arstuna—have you run away, or what?"

"M'Arstuna," he replied, cheerfully. "Ah, M'Arstuna fell last week-you've been unconscious for a fortnight, you seewith all the honors of war, you know, trumpets blowing, flags flying, just as though they had the best of it, but for all that, weren't they glad to go. Israel made for his tents, I can tell you-never saw such a sight in my life."

"And Sorais?" I asked. "Sorais-oh, Sorais is a prisoner; they gave her up, the scoundrels," he added, with a change of tone-"sacrificed the Queen to save their skins, you see. She is being brought up here, and I don't know what will happen to her, poor soul!" and

"Where is Curtis?" I asked. "He is with Nyleptha. She rode out to meet us to-day, and there was a grand to do, I can tell you. He is coming to see you to-morrow; the doctors (for there is a medical "faculty" in Zu-Vendis as elsewhere) thought that he had better not come to-

I said nothing, but somehow I thought to myself that notwithstanding the doctors he might have given me a look; but there, when a man is newly married and has just gained a great victory he is apt to listen to the advice of doctors, and quite right, too. Just then I heard a familiar voice informing me that "Mousieur must now couch himself", and looking up perceived Alphonse's enormous black mustachios curling away in the distance. "So you are here?" I said. "Mais oui, Monsieur; the war is now finished, my military instincts are satisfied, and I return to nurse Monsieur." I laughed, or rather tried to; but whatever may have been Alphonse's failings as a warrior (and I fear that he did not come up to the level of his Leroic grandfather in this particular, showing thereby how true is the saving that it is a bad thing to be overshadowed by some great ancestral name) a better or a kinder nurse never lived. Poor Alphonse! I hope he will always think of me as kindly as I think of

On the morrow I saw Curtis, and Nyleptha with him, and he told me the whole history of what had happened since Umslopogaas and I galloped wildly away from the battle to save the life of the Queen. I seemed to me that he had managed the thing exceedingly well, and showed great ability as a general. Of course, however, our loss had been dreadfully heavy-indeed, I am afraid to say how many perished in the desperate battle I have described. but I know that the slaughter has appreciably affected the male population of the country. He was very pleased to see me, dear fellow that he was, and thanked me with tears in his eyes for the little I had been able to do. I saw him, however, start violently when his eyes fell upon my

As for Nyleptha, she was positively radiant now that "her dear lord" had come back with no other injury than an ugly scar on his forehead. I do not believe that she allowed all the fearful slaughter that had taken place to weigh ever so little in the balance against this one fact, or even to greatly diminish her joy; and I cannot blame her for it, seeing that it is the nature of loving woman to look at all things through the spectacles of her love, and little does she reck of the misery of the many if the happiness of the one be assured. That is human nature, which the Positivists tell us is just perfection—so no doubt it is all right.

"And what art thou going to do with Sorais?" I asked her. Instantly her bright brow darkened to a "Sorais," she said, with a little stamp of the foot, "ah, but Sorais!" Sir Henry hastened to turn the subject. "You will soon be about and all right again now, old fellow," he said. I shook my head and laughed.

"Don't deceive yourselves," I said. may be about for a little. but I shall never

SUNRISE AND VENICE.

Richer and richer, so higher and higher, Deeper and deeper it takes hue; Brighter and brighter it reaches through The space of heaven and the place of stars, Till all is rich as a rose can be And my rose leaves fall into billows of fire.

Then beams reach upward as arms from the sess; Then lances and arrows are aimed at me; Then lances, and spangles, and spars, and bars Are broken, and shivered, and strown on the sea, And, around and about me, tower and spire Start from the billows like tongues of fire. -Joaquin Miller.

Rare Old Books.

Every once in a while a bookseller will run across a real curiosity in the most unexpected manner. Last week I purchased a Dutch Bible, printed in 1700, from two young ladies, the daughters of a deceased clergyman, and an old fellow I had never seen before dropped around the next day and sold me an Abyssinian prayer book printed with a pen on hogskin leaves and bound in board. It is a rare curiosity, and I haven't as yet found any one who could read it. A man will have lots of funny experiences in the second hand book trade. Recently a young fellow sold me a book for $2 which I learned on the same day he had purchased of an agent on the time payment plan for $5. I learned afterward that, although he had sold the book to me immediately after the first payment, he made all the other payments promptly. On another occasion a lady wished me to visit her house to see some books, and I called and bought an encyclopedia. Two days afterward her husband called and purchased another set, and told me how his wife had sold his set because she never saw him use them and they took up too much room in the book case. - Dealer in Globe-Democrat.

Try And Be Cured.

Lame back and nervous debility, associated with rheumatism, is sometimes met with in every day life, but as a rule we find not more than two of these complaints in the same party. Be this as it may. The only sure and perfect cure is electricity and the best form of administering it is by Norman's electric belts and insoles. W. J. Wilson is agent, and from him you can procure testimonials and circulars relating to any of your complaints.
