A MAN WITH A MEMORY.

CAPTURE OF A SUPPOSED SPY INSIDE THE FEDERAL LINES.

The Suspect Answers Every Question "as Straight as a String"—Algebra in a Boat—Repeating the Roll—Entrapped at Last.

Just before Sherman advanced on his Georgia campaign a man supposed to be a Confederate spy was one day arrested in a Union camp. He was in Federal uniform, but his look and language were unmistakably southern. He claimed to belong to a regiment in another camp about two miles away, and he was sent to the guard house until his assertion could be verified or disproved. It was in the camp of a Wisconsin regiment that the spy, who gave his name as George Swift, was arrested. He had come there ostensibly to visit friends, but some of the boys had seen him slyly taking notes, and he had asked such questions as no private Federal soldier would have any use for. The boys had no sooner got the idea that the stranger was a spy than they gave information to me, and I put him under arrest. I saw at a glance that he was of southern birth. This was not so much against him, for at that time we had plenty of Tennessee and Kentucky men with us.

"What command do you belong to?" I asked.
"The—4th Illinois," he replied.
I asked what brigade and division, who was his captain and various other things, and he returned what seemed to be straight answers to every question. When I asked who he had come to visit in the Wisconsin regiment he was lame. He mentioned the name of a man no one had ever heard of. It was on this point alone that I held him. A messenger was at once sent after the Illinois captain named, and in about an hour he appeared. The supposed spy was taken to the tent of the brigade general, and as soon as brought face to face with the captain he saluted and said: "Capt. Morton, the people here seem to think I am a rebel spy."

"And who are you?" queried the captain, plainly astonished.
"Do you ask that?" reproachfully inquired the man. "Who should I be but George Swift of your own company?"
"You can't be. I never saw you before in my life."
"Why, Capt. Morton?"
The two men looked at each other as if doubting their own senses, and the general asked of Swift:
"How long have you been with his company?"
"Four months, sir. I came down as a recruit from Pekin."

"Who is your orderly sergeant?"
"Sergt. White, sir."
"Who are your commissioned officers?"
"Capt. Morton, First Lieut. Green, and Lieut. Davis. The latter is home on furlough."
"How many men in the company?"
"Fifty-eight, sir."
"Who are your tent mates?"
"Oscar Jackson, Thomas Parker, and John Pridgeon."
"Well, captain?" queried the general, as he turned to Capt. Morton.
The captain was clean beat. He was dead sure that no such man belonged to his company, and yet the suspect had answered every question as straight as a string.
"I'll stake my life that I never saw this man before," the captain finally answered, "and I know every man in my company by name."
The spy was ordered to strip to his shirt, and for the first time his coolness seemed to desert him. He reproached the captain for permitting this indignity, but slowly disrobed. In one of his boot legs was a pocket, and in this pocket we found a paper bearing figures as follows:

| | |
|------|--------|
| A... | 10,000 |
| B... | 9,000 |
| C... | 1,900 |

There were four or five sets of these memoranda, running from "1d." to "4d." When asked to explain the meaning of them, he said they were some old examples in algebra he had been working out with the boys. In a few minutes we were satisfied that the paper read: "Artillery in first division, twenty-seven pieces." The "P" stood for infantry, and the "C" for cavalry. We were satisfied, and yet we were not, for as soon as we made it out the way I have given it to you, Swift said: "General, Capt. Morton does not seem to be a good hand to remember faces. Will you please send for the orderly sergeant and my tent mates! If I can't show by them that I have been with Company G four months you can order me hung as a spy."

The cool proposition staggered the general. Had we discovered the paper in the man's pocket instead of his boots he would have been allowed to walk off. That discovery looked suspicious, and he was ordered back to the guard house and the persons sent for. Two hours later he was confronted with the orderly sergeant.

"Sergeant, do you know this man?" asked the general.
"No, sir."
"Isn't he a member of your company?"
"No, sir."
Swift actually grinned as if it were a good joke, and said:
"Perhaps I have changed skins with somebody since I came out of camp this morning. Sergt. White, your given name is Thomas. You came from Chicago. You have been twice wounded. Your father was down to see you last week. You get love letters from your girl in Galesburg. You are 32 years old. You have a brother Ben in Company E. Hear me call the roll of our company: Allbright, Allison, Andrews, Arkwright, Bement, Beamer, Bostwick, Carter, Corliss, Collins, Costigan, Cummerford."
And the man rattled off forty or fifty names as fast as he could speak, and he got them all correct, too. The sergeant looked from his captain to the prisoner, and then pinched himself to see if he was awake or asleep.

"I—I never saw him before," he finally stammered, "but he must belong to the company."
"Well, take him back to camp with you, sergeant," observed the general. "Hold on, though, didn't we send for his tent mates?"
"They are here, sir."
"Well, we'll see if they recognize him."
The three men were brought in, and inside of five minutes Swift was a doomed man. He had come into camp four or five days previous, claiming to be looking for a friend, and had bribed the boys to let him into the tent. He made his excursions through the division from this point. He must have been a man with a wonderful memory, and he had gained oceans of information, without seeming to pump anybody. He tried to brave it out against the three men, but other members of the company were sent for, and his nerve at last gave way. A court martial was convened, and four days after his capture Swift was hung. While he died game and would admit nothing, it was satisfactorily settled that he came from Johnson's army, and that he was old in the business. I was at the foot of the gallows as he mounted it, and when the noose was put over his head I hear him say:
"Gentlemen, it's a d-d fine morning to start on such a journey as mine!"—New York Sun.

PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE.

Effect of Distilled Water on the Eyes—The Hot Sand Bag—Simple Cures.

It has long been the accepted practice among physicians and pharmacists to use distilled water in making up lotions for the eyes. An English oculist now takes exceptions to this rule. He has found that when a lotion of boric acid—an excellent lotion, much employed—is made with distilled water its use is attended with some discomfort and smarting, and what is more singular, the irritation is even greater when distilled water alone is used. Anybody, he says, can verify for himself that a drop of distilled water in the eye seems to be a most unpleasant and foreign element. This is ascribed to the fact that the natural lachrymose secretions of the eye are slightly salty, and pure spring or cold water containing salts in solution is therefore more agreeable to the tissue ordinarily wet with this secretion than is water made perfectly neutral by distillation. The addition of two grains and a half of chloride of sodium or common salt to an ounce of distilled water renders any lotion for the eye more soothing and beneficial, according to the experience of the authority alluded to.

A Sand Bag for the Sick Room.

One of the most convenient articles to be used in a sick room is a sand bag. Get some clean, fine sand, dry it thoroughly in a kettle on the stove; make a bag about eight inches square of flannel, fill it with the dry sand, sew the opening carefully together and cover the bag with cotton or linen cloth. This will prevent the sand from sifting out, and will also enable you to heat the bag quickly by placing it in the oven or on top of the stove. Herald of Health says that after once using this you will never again attempt to warm the feet or hands of a sick person with a bottle of hot water or a brick. The sand holds the heat for a long time, and the bag can be tucked up to the back without hurting the invalid.

Scurf on a Baby's Head.

A dark brown scurf sometimes gathers on a baby's head, giving the child an unclean and dirty appearance. This may be easily removed by rubbing a little vaseline or sweet oil upon the spot and letting it remain for a few hours; then upon washing it with warm water and soap the offending dandruff will disappear and the little head be left clean and white as any part of the body. It is important that this should be removed as often as it makes its appearance, for if left the hair is often injured or ceases growing in consequence.

How to Cure a Cold.

Just before getting into bed for the night soak the feet in mustard water as hot as can be borne, put the feet first into a pail half full of warm water, adding by degrees very hot water until the desired heat is attained, protecting the body and knees with blankets so as to retain the vapor of the water and induce a good sweat. Next take half a dozen drops or more of strong spirits of camphor on white sugar or in water, get into bed under plenty of blankets and sleep off the cold.

Test for Sewer Gas.

American Analyst gives the following test for sewer gas: Saturate unglazed paper with a solution of one Troy ounce of pure acetate of lead in eight fluid ounces of rain water; let it partially dry, then expose in the room suspected of containing sewer gas. The presence of the gas in any considerable quantity soon blackens the test paper.

Popular Remedies.

Some people assert that they keep in good health by eating a fine, juicy apple every day before breakfast; others who are, or fancy they are, bilious, take the juice of one lemon in a little water each morning before eating; while many dyspeptics claim to find relief in drinking at each meal a gobletful of water as hot as can be taken.

Another Danger in the Banana.

Dr. N. B. Bates reports cases of intestinal concretions resembling black sand—hard, sharp and gritty—which were finally identified as the cells of the banana fruit. This would indicate that in cases of intestinal trouble the banana might cause a mechanical irritation leading to an aggravation of the complaint.

Chloroform Vapor for Earache.

Earache in any form is said to be quickly relieved by filling the ear with chloroform vapor from an uncorcked bottle—vapor only, not the liquid; ten drops upon a lump of sugar is also considered an excellent remedy for hicough and ordinary nausea.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.

When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Strictures on the Whigs.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—Sir George Trevelyan in a speech at Sunderland, said he was glad the Whigs, who had hitherto been the cause of the downfall of every liberal ministry, had finally gone over to the Tories. The liberals, as a consequence, would be more united in future. Lord Hartington's declaration that the breach in the liberal party would not be healed before the next election means that the liberal organization had been broken up by the very men who had risen to the summit of their ambition by the aid of liberal shoulders.

Dyspepsia.

Much will necessarily depend upon the care exercised in the selection of food, which is all important to the dyspeptic. Hamilton's Pills may be used with the greatest benefit in cases where liver and bowel complications are produced by or are a result of dyspepsia. Commence with one pill every second day immediately after dinner, and reduce the dose gradually until only one-quarter of a pill is taken, which will be found sufficient to stimulate the liver and assist in the more perfect assimilation of food in the stomach. Dyspeptics, try Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut.

Keep in Good Humour.

This injunction applies not only to the mental but the physical welfare. Salt rheum, erysipelas, and all other venereal humors of the blood are perfectly curable by Burdock Blood Bitters.
