An Electrical Method of Preparing Paper Stencils for Letters and Circulars. Phenomena of Sound Illustrated by Toj Musical Instruments.

The student of acoustics need not go beyoud the realm of toys for much of his experimental apparatus. The Scientific American calls attention to various toy musical instruments capable of illustrating many of the phenomena of sound very satisfactorily, if not quite as well as some of the more pretentious apparatus.

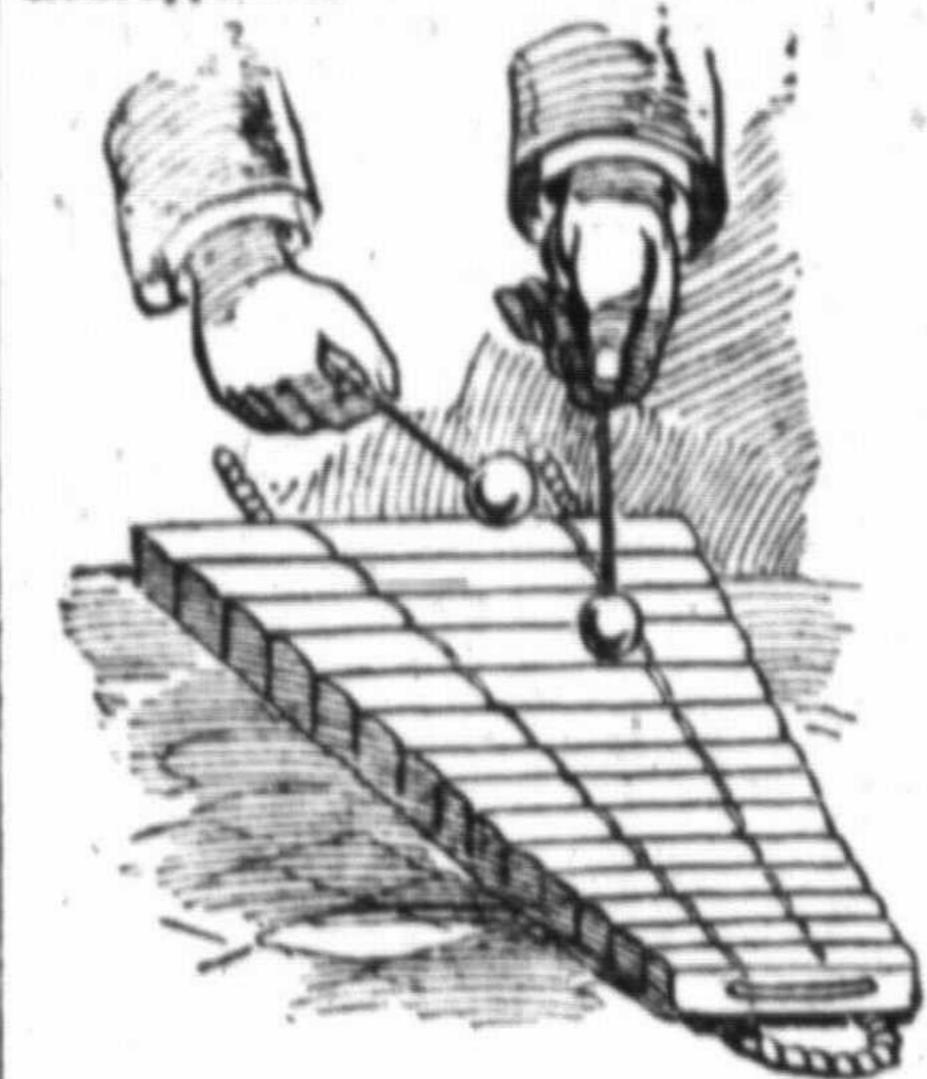

FIG. 1-A XYLOPHONE.

Numbered with these instruments are the xylophone and metalophone, which employ free vibrating rods supported at their nodes. The xylophone consists of a series of wooden rods of different lengths, bored transversely at their points of least vibration and strung together on cords. The instrument may either be suspended by the cords or laid upon loosely twisted cords situated at the nodes. By passing the small spherical wooden mallet accompanying the instrument over the wooden rods, very agreeable liquid musical tones are produced by the vibration of the rods, and when the rods are struck by the mallet they yield tones which are very pure, but not prolonged. The cheapest forms of xylophone are tuned by slitting the rods transversely at their centers on the under side by means of a saw to a depth required to give them the flexibility necessary to the production of the desired tones. The rods are divided by the nodes into three vibrating parts, the parts between the nodal points and the ends being about one-fourth of the distance between the two nodes. The metalophone is similar in form to the xylophone, but, as its name suggests, the vibrating bars ar made of metal-hardened steel.

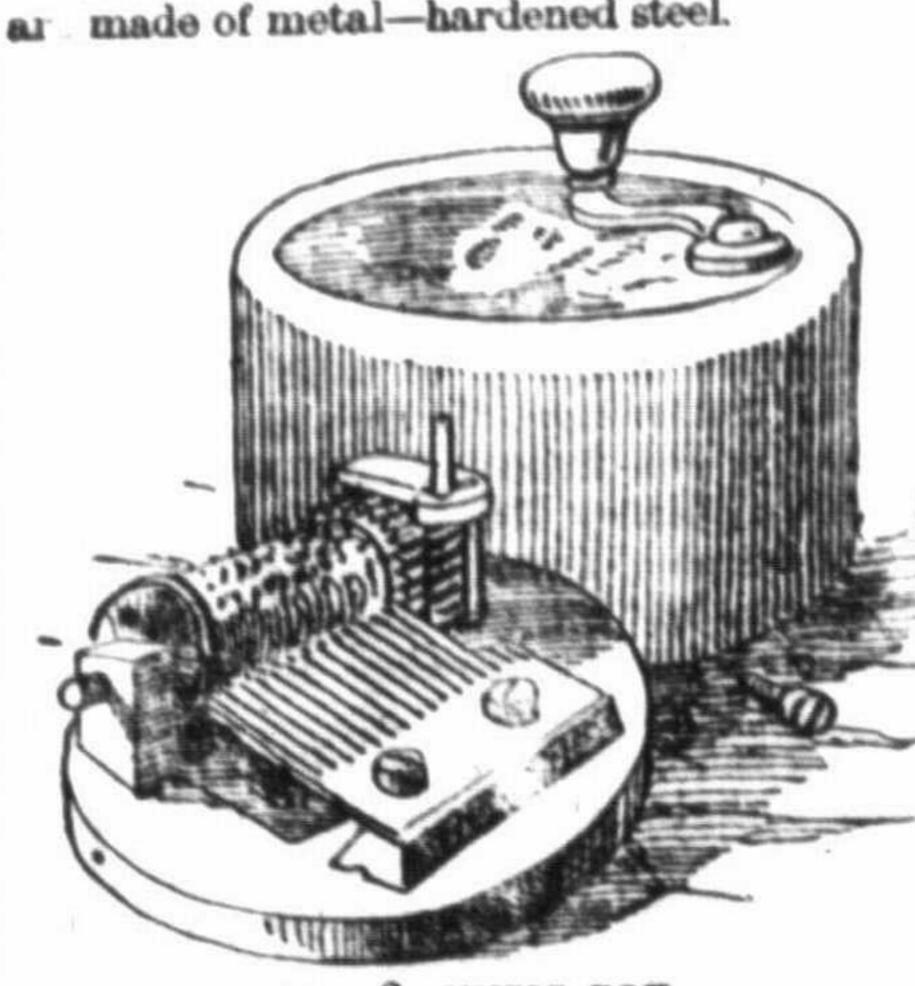

FIG. 2-MUSIC BOX.

The toy music box furnishes an example of the class of instruments in which musical sounds are produced by the vibration of bars or tongues which are rigidly held at one end and free to vibrate at the other end. The tongues of the music box are made by slitting the edge of a steel plate, forming a comb, which is arranged with its teeth projecting into the paths of the pins of the cylinder, which are distributed around and along the cylinder in the order necessary to secure the required succession of tones. The engagement of one of the pins of the cylinder with one of the tongues raises the tongue, which, when liberated, yields the note due to its position in the comb. The tongues are tuned by filing or scraping them at their free or fixed ends, or by loading them at their free ends. In this instrument the sonorous vibrations are produced by the tongue, which itself has the dedired pitch.

Value of Exhaust Steam.

Exhaust steam is of practically the same value, claims The Sawmill Gazette, as an equal quantity of direct steam of high pressure for heating in the winter season, for use in dye houses, and with proper arrangements for many of the numberless dyeing operatiens carried on in textile and other manufactories. For all these purposes the pipes must necessarily be somewhat larger than tney need be where direct steam of high pressure is used. In many cases water fail ure has resulted from an attempt to use exhaust for the above purposes, the result has been due to the use of a too contracted system of piping, and in other cases to a wrongly designed system. Where a large establishment is heated by the exhaust, the system should be designed especially to promote a free circulation, otherwise dead failure is certain to result.

Filling Wood and Removing Old Paint. The Carriage Monthly tells its readers how to remove varnish from a panel after it has pitted and has stood so long that it is too hard and dry for turpentine to soften it, but too dry for the stone to rub it. A good way is to run over it lightly with spirits of ammonia. Do not let the ammonia remain too long on the varnish before you use the scraper on it, as it will be likely to eat through and affect the under coats. The object to be gained is only to take off the pitted coat. After removal, wash off with Castile soap and water. Let stand an hour or two to enable the under coat to get hardened. Again rub down with rag and pumice stone lightly, and then revarnish. It would be better, i. the time will warrant it, to coat over again with a light wash of rubbing varnish, to guard against a possible repetition of the pitting.

Electric Stencils.

M. Carci has invented an electrical method of preparing paper stencils for letters, circulars, etc. In this apparatus a piece of very thin paper rests on a carbon block connected with one pole of a small induction coil, while the style with which the writing is done is connected with the other pole. On using the appointing, a series of sparks pass between the style and the earbon block, perforating the paper, which can then be used as a steneil in the ordinary way.

Migration of Eirds. Mr. W. Mattieu Williams thinks that the instinct which guides the swallow southward in autumn is probably of a very practical and unpostical kind. Its food is chiefly flying i seeks, whose development ceases with the alvance of cold from the north, and in migrating the bird is simply following its retreating tood supply.

HOME RULE IN IRELAND.

The English Home Rule Union Reports on the Subject-Claims Set Forth. Not long ago the home rule union officers. who are in Westminster, appointed a deputation of members of parliament and business citizens to visit all parts of Ireland and make a report on certain subjects. The following is an abstract of the conclusions which will be fully argued in the forthcoming report : The Irish people are eager for peace and abhor and dread outrage, as much as Englishmen do.

That their demands, as well in respect of land as the national question, are distinguished by extraordinary moderation.

3. That the National league, proclaimed as a dangerous association, is the chief agency for maintenance of law and order in

4. That political meetings in Ireland are not less orderly and well conducted than they are in England and Scotland, and that the only danger of a breach of the peace is the irritating display of force on the part of the authorities. 5. That the Irish nationalists, like the English home rulers, are not separatists. 6. That in Ulster the great majority of the people who are opposed to home rule will, when home rule is granted, forget past differences; that considerations of common interest will make them join with their fellow countrymen in carrying on the government in Ireland, and that they themselves even now are well aware that this will be the case. 7. That as a matter of fact nobody in Ireland fears religious persecution.

8. That the quarrel of the Irish people is with mob law, and not with the people England, and that, so far as the two peoples are concerned, a real union has for the first time in their history been established.

9. That the members of the Irish parliamentary party have been chosen by the leaders solely for their patriotism and readiness to support anything that will promote the national cause, and that so soon as home rule has been established many men of special culture and qualifications, who at present hold aloof, will come forward and assist in making and administering good

10. That the present English administration of government in Ireland is not only most ineffective in promoting the good of the nation and most irritating to the mass of the Irish people, but as a heavy and unnecessary burden on the taxpayers of England, Scotland and Wales.

It is intended to circulate millions of copies of this throughout the United King-

Tact or Good Moral Taste the Secret of Pleasing Manners.

No one with a delicate touch will try to polish a piece of wood by rubbing it against the grain. Neither will anybody considerate of a cat's feelings stroke pussy's fur the wrong way. Men and women are of more value than mahogany or cats, and should be treated with a more delicate touch or tactfor tact is moral touch-even when we do them good or confer on them a favor.

A person of tact is one who readily appreciates and gracefully does what is required by circumstances-no more and no less. If he does a neighborly act he takes care that he does not burden the neighbor with a feeling of obligation. Should he be made the confidant of an angry friend, he listens, but guards his lips, for he remembers the principle of the worldly wise author, who said: "Never join with your friend when he abuses his horse or his wife, unless the one is about to be sold or the other to be buried."

A robust old gentleman gave his seat to a lady who entered a crowded tram car. "Take my seat, sir, please; I never like to see an old person stand," said a young miss, jumping up and offering her seat to the old gentleman.

Her motive was kind, but her manner was patronizing. It rebuked the lady for taking the old gentleman's seat and it emphasized her own youth and the gentleman's age. Had she been a girl of tact she would have risen with the old man and said, "Allow me, sir, to offer the lady my seat."

An elderly lady standing in a tram car was offered a seat by a young lady, who, rising, said, "I am younger than you; I will

"Suit yourself," replied the lady, with emphatic brusqueness, for the drawing of the line between her own age and the youth of the other touched her pride.

She remained standing and the young lady wondered, because she was not sufficiently sensitive to be conscious of her own want of English Better Form than French. The English phrase, "The favor of an auswer is requested," is by many considered better form than the letters R. S. V. P., and is much used in place of the latter. The Decline of the Toothpick. At dinners given in the best society the toothpick has no place either in the dining room or drawing room. In its pristine glory

it exists only in the hotels.

I have been a great sufferer from catarrh for over ten years; had it very bad, could hardly breathe. Some nights I could not sleep-had to walk the floor. I purchased Ely's Cream Balm and am using it freely; it is working a cure surely. I have advised several friends to use it, and with happy results in every case. It is the one medicine above all others made to cure catarrh, and it is worth its weight in gold. I thank God I have found a remedy I can use with safety and that does all that is claimed for it. is curing my deafness. - B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

Dyspepsia.

Much will neccessarily depend upon the care exercised in the selection of food, which is all important to the dyspeptic. Hamilton's Pills may be used with the greatest benefit in cases where liver and bowel complications are produced by or are a result of dyspepsia. Commence with one pill every second day immediately after dinner, and reduce the dose gradually until until onequarter of a pill, only is taken, which will be found sufficient to stimulate the liver and assist in the more perfect assimilation of food in the stomach. Dyspeptics, try Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut.

Keep in Good Humour. This injunction applies not only to the mental but the physical welfare. Salt rheum, erysipelas, and all obstinate humours of the blood are perfectly curable by Burdock Blood Bitters.
