Whig's Telephone Number, 128. WEDDED A NATIVE GIRL

The Romantic Case of Commander Bethell, Who Was Killed by Boers in 1884.

LONDON, Dec. 15. -Stirling, sitting in chancery division, had before him a romantic marriage case, arising out of the death of Commander Bethell, who was shot by Boers in 1884 in an engagement in which Sir Charles Warren also took part. Commander Bethell, before his death, had become enamored of a girl belonging to the Baralong tribe. He married her according to the rites of that tribe, the ceremony consisting of the slaughter of an ox, the head of which was sent to the mother of the bride, while the father was provided with a plow. The name of the bride was Teepoo. About ten days after the death of Comman der Bethell she gave birth to a daughter, who was subsequently baptised under the name of Mebetelle, meaning the mother of Bethell. In support of these statements Montsioa, African king, the chief of the Boralede cavalry, made affidavit to the ef fect that leepoo was duly married to Commander Bethell, and that she was not before married. Commander Bethell, by his will, left a certain number of heifers to Teepoo, and directed that if the child were born it should be educated in England after it reached eight years of age, and if a boy he should enter the English army, but Teepoo should forfeit her property if she misbehaved. Commander Bethell left considerable property in Yorkshire, and the question before the court was as to whether the marriage was a legal one, and the daughter consequently legitimate and entitled to the property. Hastings, queen's counsel, contend ed this was not a polygamous marriage, and was consequently valid. There may have been polygamy in the Baralong tribe, but Commander Bethell lived with Teepoo as his only wife, and had no intention of committing polygamy.

CHURCHILL RECONCILED.

Approaching Return to the Salisbury Cabinet-Likely to Enter the Ministry. London, Dec. 19, - Lord Randolph Churchill's declaration at Stockport, that the safety and prosperity of the British empire is bound up with the strength and prosperity of the tory party, together with his strong protestations of fidelity to that party, are held to mark his final reconciliation with Lord Salisbury and his approaching return as a member of the ministry. Already rumours are current of his intention to reenter the cabinet on the reassembling of parliament. It is said that when he returns it will no longer as chancellor of the exchequer and leader of the house of commons as before, but probably as secretary of war, with Mr. Goschen leading the house, and Mr. Smith "kicked up stairs," as the phrase goes, to the house of lords. There are also rumours that Lord Hartington will join the cabinet, but these have always been current since he has supported the present administration. It is certain he will not until convinced that he has no longer the slightest influence over the liberal voters in the country, but it is evident, from a recent speech, in which he seemed to forecast the defeat of the liberal unionists in a future election, that he is rapidly arriving at this conviction.

Leaden Pellets in His Face. LONDON, Dec. 19 .- While the Prince of Wales and a party of gentlemen were shooting at Sandringham on Saturday a gun in the hands of one of the sportsmen was accidentally discharged. One of the shots lodged in the prince's nose, and another in his cheek. The injuries are slight and the pellets were easily extracted by a physician. Another account states that the accident was caused by a defective gun, and that the shots scattered in several directions, the gentleman handling the weapon having himself been slightly wounded by the explosion.

DEATH OF A BISHOP.

Right Rev. Dr. Carberry Has Passed Away at Cork of Heart Disease,

HAMILTON, Dec. 19 .- A cable message was received to-day to the effect that Bishop Carberry had died this morning at St. Mary's Priory, Cork, of heart disease. Bishop Carberry was consecrated bishop of Hamilton by Cardinal Howard, of Rome, three years ago and reached here four months later, and resided in Hamilton until last September, when he left for Rome to attend the pope's jubilee. He was suddenly taken ill at Cork and never reached Rome. The bishop was grand prior of the order of St. Dominick before his consecration.

THE DETECTIVE'S STORY.

HOW THE MONTREAL DETECTIVE ROBBERY CASE WAS WORKED.

Interview With Deputy Sheriff Frank Hayner - Some Startling Revelations - The Way in Which He Says Immense Robberies Were Planned-The Rich Widow Buildings.

TORONTO, Dec. 19. -Mr. Frank Hayner, of New York, arrived here on Wednesday. He has been for the past fifteen weeks working up the robberies alleged, to have been committed by Detectives Fahey and Naegele and Constable Bureau, of Montreal.

He conversed freely regarding the work which he has accomplished. He said : "The newspapers in Montreal have got everything mixed. They state that I have been bought off for $10,000, and that I have left the country. It is a fact I have been approached in many ways, and I have been threatened. It is stated I am not a detective. Well my record speaks for itself. lam," he continued, "under Sheriff Grant, of New York. It was also stated in Montreal that I was an actor named Mitchell. That is incorrect. My wife is a well-known opera singer, but I was never on the stage."

"When were you first sent for to Montreal and by whom "" "Pardon me," said Mr. Hayner, "if I don't answer that question. Mr. Harry Phillips did not bring me as has been stated, and he will be astonished when he reads in London of the recent arrests. I went to Montreal on the 17th of August. The gentleman who brought me told me he believed Fahey and Naegele to be crookes. He told me to hang on and convict them if possible. I was introduced to Fahey the day I arrived. He took me for a sporting man. I made the Richelieu hotel my headquarters, but Boston was my base of operations, and I was seven or eight times between Boston and Montreal during the first eight weeks. While in Montreal Fahey and I were always first straight tip I got from him was on the lacrosse match between the Cornwalls and Montreals. He told me a job was put up, and the game was to be thrown to the Cornwalls, and that I could bet two thousand on three straights. I did not go in so heavily, however, but I bet $100 on three straight goals for Cornwall and won. After that I worked into Fahey's confidence and he eventually took me for a first-class crock. The first plan of robbery he proposed was to steal Sir Donald Smith's picture, "Les Communicants," by Jules Breton. He said he would give me a water-inspector's uniform and get me into the house to locate the picture and plan the robbery, but I told him it would be too difficult and abandoned the project. # BURYING THE ANARCHS.

THEIR BONES ARE PLANTED IN WALDHEIM, NEAR CHICAGO.

The Wives, Women and Sweethearts of the Bombthrowers Appear at the Graves in Gay Colors-Their Pallbearers Were Their Fellow Workmen in Life.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18,-The four anarchists who were hanged Nov. 11, and Louis Lingg. who committed suicide, were placed in the Waldheim cemetery to-day. The only dramatic feature of the occasion was brought about by Mrs. Parsons. She had kept in the background at the cemetery during the preliminary exercises. A few moments before Capt. Black, chief counsel for the anar chists, concluded his address, and while the spectators were in a manner held spellbound by the captain's rhetoric some one shouted, "Make way for Mrs. Parsons," and Mrs. Parsons came forward. The nearest coffin to her was that of August Spies. Her husband's was the second from this. Sergt. Maj. Cross, London, Eng., has been Mrs. Parson's eyes seemed to pick out the casket in which she was most interested. At the moment her gaze caught it she gave voice to a wail which startled the crowd. Capi. Black paused in his speech and the throng was startled. Then came a scream from Mrs Parsons which reached to the onter circles of the crowd. She strove to speak, but the words refused to come out and she sank fainting into the arms of her

Capt. Black came to the rescue by saying, in a commanding tone, "Some one please take some fresh snow and rub the lady's face." Three men made soft snowballs, rubbed Mrs. Parson's temples, and when she showed signs of consciousness she was carried away from the scene.

The funeral arrangements, as arranged by the committee, consisted of two parts. The immediate relatives of the dead men left the city at 10 o'clock in carriages. The public went by train from the Wisconsin Central depot.

When the train arrived at Waldheim station a stampede was made for the cemetery. Quickly the coffins were taken from the vault and carried to the spot where the expectant crowd were assembled. On Spies' coffin were flowers and red ribbons. Fischer's was similarly decorated. On Parsons' were bouquets of red and yellow roses, and these modest emblems served to bring out in boll relief the red clothes which covered the caskets of Engel and Lingg. The undertaker removed the lids from the coffins at the same that the mourners took their places. Among the latter were Chris. and Ferdinand Spies, with their sister Gretchen and their aged mother; Nina VanZandt with herfather; Esa, Lingg's sweetheart; Mrs. Fischer with her daughter; Mrs. Engel and Mrs. Schwab. All of the women were dressed in heavy mourning. Nina Van Zandt was a study. Not a sign of emotion appeared on her features. She chatted continuously with Capt. Black. The only one who shed tears at this time was Gretchen Spies. The remains were placed in position. While this was being done the relatives came down the incline. The first emotion from Nina Van Zandt was displayed when the last coffin was lowered. Gretchen Spies was sobbing violently when Nina broke down, but her tears were quickly staunched, and during the rest of the time the young weman showed no violent grief. The grave diggers then began to place the big granite capstone in position. A moment before this was accomplished two wreaths which had just been brought to the cemetery were placed in the grave. They were ordered by The New York Freiheit, Herr Most's paper. The capstone was lowered, cement was spread over it and the crowd walked quick-

Nobody knows Martin or where he can be found. Yesterday Martin wrote to Mr. Allison, editor of the Sportsman, enclosing half of a fifty pound note, saying he did not expect Ross to come without hearing further from him, and that he was unable to put up £200 as he expected, and was about to leave England. He would, however, send the other half of the fifty pound note to help towards backing Ross as soon as the receipt of the first half should be acknowledged.
