PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE.

A Peculiar Form of Intoxication—Evil Effects of Carbonated Waters.

Essence of ginger is popularly regarded as an innocent and harmless preparation—a sort of "old woman's remedy" or family medicine—to be dealt out for the small boy's pain under his jacket or to sustain the grandmother under a "faint spell." The following statements are therefore surprising: A druggist is said to affirm that there exists a peculiar kind of dissipation, known as ginger drinking, of the extent of which few people are aware. The article used is the essence of ginger, or the alcoholic extract ordinarily sold by druggists.

Having once acquired a liking for it, the victim becomes as much a slave to his appetite as the opium-eater or the votary of cocaine. In its effect it is much the most injurious of all such practices, for in the course of time it destroys the coating of the stomach and dooms its victim to a slow and agonizing death. The druggist says that as ginger essence contains about 100 per cent. alcohol, and whisky less than 50 per cent., the former is therefore twice as intoxicating. In fact, this is the reason why it is used by hardened old toppers whose stomachs are no longer capable of intoxicating stimulation from whisky. They need the more powerful agency of the pure alcohol in the ginger extract.

The authority mentioned relates the instance of a woman who contracted the habit through employing the ginger on several occasions for stomachic pains. The relief it afforded her was so grateful that she took to it upon any recurrence of her trouble. She found, too, that the slight exhilaration of the alcohol banished mental depression. In this way she got to using it regularly, and finally to such an excess that she was often grossly intoxicated.

Another case was that of a man who bought a four ounce bottle every morning and drank its contents by noon. He craved the stuff so ardently that he was unable to go about his business until he had set the machinery of his stomach in operation and started the circulation of the blood with this fiery draught.

Large doses are described as producing a quiet stupor and additional ones a profound lethargic slumber which lasts in some cases twenty-four hours.

Careful Nursing.

When a sick person is obliged to lie constantly in one position, as is the case with a broken leg, bed sores must be guarded against. The lower part of the back is most frequently attacked, says Good Housekeeping, and the nurse should pass her hand under it at least twice a day to see that the draw sheet is free from wrinkles and creases. Morning and night she must bathe it with a small sponge dipped in alcohol or a solution of tannic acid, and when it is dry rub it with corn starch or buckwheat flour. It may seem impossible to her to get her hand underneath, but most beds will yield a little to pressure, and by working in a roll of old linen under the back above the place to be bathed, she will obtain a little space to work in. In spite of precautions the back becomes sore, an air cushion with a hole in the middle must be used to prevent the sore from coming in contact with any surface, or it cannot heal.

Carbonated Waters.

Dr. Herzog, a German physician, calls attention to the evil results of a continuous use of carbonated waters. A daily use of such beverages will in consequence of the distension of the digestive organs, caused by the carbonic acid gas, produce nervousness, numbness, irritation, and even rupture of a vessel. These, like powerful medicines, should only be employed under the advice of a physician.

Treatment of Burns.

For simple burns oil or the white of an egg can be used. One part of carbolic acid to six parts olive oil is found to be invaluable in most cases of burns, slight or severe, and the first layer of lint should not be removed till the cure is complete, but saturated from time to time by the application of fresh outside layers.

Cleaning the Hair and Scalp.

For cleaning and softening the hair a popular means is a beaten egg rubbed well into the hair and on the scalp, and thoroughly rinsed out with several warm waters. It does not leave the skin harsh and dry, as soap, ammonia, etc., sometimes do.

Ice for Sick Stomach.

When a person is "sick at the stomach," ice taken into the mouth in small pieces, and allowed to melt before swallowing, will in very many instances relieve the discomfort.

SOCIAL ETIQUETTE.

Manners and Customs Practiced in Polite Society.

An authority on etiquette, objecting strongly to the terms "lady friend" and "gentleman friend," gives through The World the following reasons for so doing: The terms lady and gentleman have been and are so misused as to have grown almost meaningless, and their constant application to all conditions of life almost vulgar. Hence the term lady friend does not convey any impression, as a rule, beyond that the friend is a feminine one. If intended to qualify, it can only bear the inference that the person speaking of "my lady friend" has others he or she does not consider ladies. Every respectable woman or girl is presumed to be a lady, and every reputable man a gentleman, until he or she proves himself or herself to be otherwise. Among refined and cultivated people, whose use of language is the best test of its correctness, the moment a word or term becomes misused and meaningless it is dropped. Hence the reaction of late years among refined people in favor of the old Saxon terms, man and woman. Lady and gentleman in other days carried an idea of persons of good breeding and position. The desire of many people to have these terms applied to them is due to the impression that their assumption of them, or resentment when they are not applied, will give to them qualities and position they do not possess. Disreputable persons of either sex are often vehement in their claims to be called "lady" or "gentleman."

Avoid a Fussy Manner.

It is in the worst possible taste, according to Harper's Bazar, for a lady to concern herself about a gentleman's hat, the seat he has chosen, the length of a call, or anything about him. She simply smiles, bows, gives him her hand when he comes in to make a call, and puts him at his ease by her tactful conversation, as he makes an effort to be agreeable to her. She does not urge him to come again or to prolong his call; her manner must do all that. Young men are especially annoyed at any exhibition of fussiness on the part of their entertainers. "I wish Mrs. Brown would let me sit on an uncomfortable chair if I wish to," is the remark of more than one young man when he comes out of some fussy presence. Young men can take care of themselves in a parlor, and it is not an uncommon fault of American women that they are too anxious to take care of men.

Mr. Childs in Honor of John Milton.

A magnificent stained glass window in memory of Milton will shortly be placed in St. Margaret's Church. It is the gift of Mr. G. W. Childs of Philadelphia, who presented the drinking fountain to Stratford-on-Avon and the beautiful window in honor of Herbert and Cowper to Westminster Abbey. At the request of the Rector of St. Margaret's an inscription has been written for the Milton window by the American poet, Mr. J. Greenleaf Whittier, who has sent the following lines:

"The New World, honor his whose lofty plea For England's freedom made her own more sure. Whose song, immortal as its theme, shall be Their common freedom while both worlds endure."

The Raleigh window, presented to St. Margaret's by American citizens, is enriched by an inscription, from the pen of Mr. J. R. Lowell, and the Caxton window, presented by the printers of London, has an inscription written for it by Lord Tennyson. Caxton and Raleigh lie buried in the church, and the wife and infant child of Milton, whose names are recorded in the marriage register.

A Trifle Unreasonable.

Countryman (to waiter): What kind of fish have you got, mister? Waiter: Dere's white-bait, sah. Countryman: White-bait? I don't want no bait of any color. Dye expect a f-lier to ketch his own fish?

Confidence in the Future.

"Do you believe in a future state, sah?" inquired the long-haired passenger, solemnly, as the gentleman returned the bottle to the waiter. "Yesh, sah, 'twas the only; 'I live in Dakota."

Ely's Cream Balm.

I have been troubled with catarrh for the past ten years and have tried a number of remedies but found no relief until I purchased a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. I was troubled with catarrh for seven years previous to commencing the use of Ely's Cream Balm, some five months ago. It has done for me what other so-called cures failed to do, cured me. The effect of the Balm seemed magical.—Clarence L. Huff, Biddeford, Me.
