HUGH MCULLOCH.

HIS GOLDEN WEDDING SOON TO BE JOYOUSLY CELEBRATED.

The Home Life of This Hale and Hearty Octogenarian-His Good Wife and Her Pictures-liow Mr. McCulloch Twice Became Secretary of the Treasury.

Some time this month the Hon, Hugh and Mrs. McCulloch-will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day. This will be a truly golden wedding, blessed with the reward of lives passed in doing good and noble deeds of love and charity, and the participants will be surrounded and admiringly loved by a large and happy family of children and grandchildren and a multitude of warm friends.

The Hon. Hugh McCulloch, although past his 80th year, with his still vigorous intellect and perfect physical health, is a rare specimen of ripe old age. Tall and broad shouldered, his well rounded figure is surmounted by a noble, well shaped head, a finely cut, clean shaven face, scarcely showing a wrinkle or other sign of decay. With his kind, bright, grayish blue eyes, the mirror of a pure soul and mind, he looks more like the typical English country gentleman than the true American that he is. Although free from all care and worry, and practically retired from all active business, Mr. McCulloch's life is by no means one of idlensss. As there is no sign of abatement of his mental and physical faculties, so there are few minutes of his days unoccupied. Always an early riser, he leads and always has led a most abstemious and in-1 dustrious life. During the summer months, which he, with his family, spends at his country seat, Holly Hills, Md., Mr. Mc-

Culloch rises daily HUGH M'CULLOCH at 5 a. m., and in his shirt sleeves, a broad brimmed straw hat covering his head; makes his daily round over the extensive farm connected with his place, devoting a great deal of care to the numerous broods of chickens, which he especially takes a delight in feeding and attending, while Mrs. Mc-Culloch, with equal interest, superintends her model dairy and extensive hot houses, where she cultivates and grows the most delicious grapes, oranges and flowers of all descriptions. There is no professional florist in Washington who can rival her in the production and growing of Fare and beautiful roses,

Mrs. McCulloch annually sends thousands of the choicest cut flowers as presents to her numerous friends, for the decoration of churches and for the adornment of the sick wards of the hospitals. If Mrs. McCulloch ever neglected any of the many duties of her home it was for the sake of sweet charity, which, with her, has not always begun at home. There is hardly another lady in Washington who works more actively for church and charitable institutions. In fact, her work would soon tire out many of the young ladies and matrons of the present day, though Mrs. McCulloch is only ten years the junior of her octogenarian husband. Having frequently visited and lived several years in Europe for the sake of completing the education of her daughters, both she and they have acquired a perfect command of many languages, and one rarely mets a better informed lady than Mrs. Mc-Culloch. She is also an accomplished amateur artist, and she knows how to delineate her favorites-the flowers-with a life likeness and truth which place her work above the products of many professional painters.

Holly Hills is an estate of over 400 acres of ground, delightfully situated in Maryland, and bought by Mr. McCulloch mostly on account of its healthful, beautiful location. His Washington residence is a four-story brick house, less conspicuous by its elegance than by its home like and comfortable interior, situated in McPherson square, one of the most fashionable quarters in Washington, During the last few years Mr. McCulloch has devoted several hours daily to the writing of his memoirs, containing most interesting reminiscences of the grea ...nen and times of his long and useful dedicated to his children, but it is to be hoped that these products of a keen observation and a wonderful memory will one day be given to the public. Born in December, 1808, in M. ine, Mr. McCulloch received his early education in Bos-

MRS. HUGH M'CULLOCH. ton, later studying law in that city. Beginning practice at Fort Wayne in 1838, somewhat later he was appointed cashier of a branch of the State bank of Indiana and also a director of that institution. In 1863, at the request of Mr. Chase, Mr. McCulloch went to Washington to organize a national bureau of currency. In 1865 he was selected by Mr. Lincoln secretary of the treasury, filling this office until March, 1869. In the following year Mr. McCulloch went to London as a partner in the banking house of Jay Cook, McCulloch & Co., which firm was afterward changed to the style of that of McCulloch & Co. in 1874. He returned to the United States in 1876. One Sunday afternoon in the fall of 1883, during President Arthur's administration, Mr. McCulloch and family had gathered around a cheerful fire in the large sitting room at his country seat when a carriage drew up the long winding path leading to the house. It proved to be, the president's, and soon Mr. Arthur alighted. Heartily welcomed, he enjoyed what he afterward spoke of as a delightful evening. Requesting a few minutes of private conversation with Mr. McCulloch before going, the gentlemen. retired to an adjoining room. After the president had gone Mr. McCulloch informed the family that he had been asked by the president to accept the office of secretary of the treasury during the remainder of his administration. A hearty cheer from the sons and grandsons of Mr. McCulloch for the president, showed the delight of the family to see their beloved sire thus honored. No secretary of the treasury has twice held that important office save Mr. McCulloch.

Incongruous Bric-a-Bric.

The figure of a baseball pitcher done in clay, seven novices about to take the black veil, a basket of artificial fruit, a manual of etiquette, courtship, etc., pictures of famous actresses, church books and dramatic plays are mingled together in one of the prominent shop windows on Broadway, where taste and the display of good judgment are supposed to govern the establishment.—New York Trioune.

PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE.

Safe and Painless Surgery of the Present.

Fallacies Contradicted. Anæsthetics have rendered even grave surgical operations almost painless, and other modern improvements have rendered them comparatively safe. Changes in surgical methods within a single decade amount almost to a revolution, and it is important that this should be understood, for patients, from a fear that was once very reasonable, are liable to put off operations until too late.

There used to be a great and ever present danger of suppuration and consequent blood poisoning. Suppuration was looked on as inevitable. But science now shows that no suppuration is possible unless the germs of it are introduced from without. The germs were formerly introduced with the hand of the operator, or those of his assistants, or by his instruments, his threads, his sponges, his plasters or his bandages; or they floated in with the infected air, with which every hospital was specially charged.

Now it is known that various solutions destroy all such germs. The operating room is therefore kept disinfected, So are the surgeons and attendants, especially their hands and nails. Instruments and sponges are taken, at using, directly from the carbolic solution. Plasters and bandages, and all ligatures for tying blood vessels or sewing up wounds, are rendered aseptic. The skin of the patient is scrubbed with soap and water, and the parts adjacent to the wound covered with disinfecting towels,

According to medical authority, the wound is now dressed with no expectation that fever will arise, or that suppuration will occur, or that the dressing will require renewal. The patient eats and sleeps well from the first, and the surgeon removes the dressing only to find the wound united, and this, too, though the largest wounds are fully sewed up, and without drainage tubes, Wholesomeness of Canned Fruits.

According to Popular Science, Mr. T. P. White gives, in a communication to the Chemical society, a decidedly negative answer to the question whether the acids of canned fruits may not form poisonous salts with the tin. He roports, as the result of his experiment, that "in is entirely devoid of danger, when taken internally, in any form that might arise from being in contact with fruit or vegetables." He believes that the cases of accidental poisoning were due to solder or other impurities-arsenic, copper or lead. Professor W. Matthieu Williams says that there need be no lead in the solder; that it is only put in for cheapness' sake, and that tin makes a superior solder for an alloy. Therefore, all danger may be obviated by prohibiting the use of any other solder than pure tin.

Chewing Gum Condemned.

A St. Louis physician denounces the idea that chewing gum is an mid to digestion. Any well informed physiologist, he says, will deny this at once. Chewing gum produces a flow of saliva into the stomach at a time when it is not needed by that organ. The saliva burdens the stomach, and forces it to abnormal action to get rid of it, and at the same time the salivary glands are robbed of the secretion, and obliged to do double work to produce the saliva necessary for mastication and digestion. So far as the stomach is concerned, chewing gum is as injurious as chewing tobacco.

To Soften and Whiten the Hands. To overcome the roughening effect of keeping the hands much in water, especially where the water is hard, dogskin or prepared French gloves are worn at night. Glycerine and rosewater, cold cream and washing with almond powder, are also resorted to for beautifying the hands.

Mental Overwork.

If a student, young or old, dreams or talks of his studies in his or her sleep it is time to call a halt. Turn the attention to something lse and diminish the hours of mental application. If you don't an enervated system and a weakened intellect will be the inevitable result.

A Safe Mustard Plaster.

It is claimed that if mustard be mixed with the white of an egg, instead of water, a plaster may be made which will draw thoroughly without blistering.

One Thing and Another.

Take cod liver oil in tomato catsur. Snuff powdered borax or alum to clear the head in catarrh or catarrhal cold.

To remove warts rub with lemon juice several times a day.

When you have occasion to use cloths wet in hot water about an invalid, try steaming them and thus avoid the difficult task of wringing them out in hot water.

When the purity of water is suspected, and no other can be obtained, it should be boiled before using it.

SOCIAL ETIQUETTE.

Manners and Customs Practiced in Polite Society.

The toothpick, when used with discretion, at proper times and in proper places, is an unobjectionable little instrument. Its occasional employment is necessary, as a rule, to cleanliness and the preservation of the teeth. So also is the tooth brush. This adjunct of the toilet is, however, never used in public. The person who, after partaking of a meal, should proceed to publicly use his tooth brush, would speedily find himself banished from decent society. Yet such action would be less objectionable to witness than the service to which some people who pretend to refinement and culture, put the toothpick. There is but one place in which it may be rightly used-the dressing room-and no person who has the slightest consideration for the feelings of others will handle it anywhere else.

It would seem unnecessary to make such statements as the foregoing, and yet the use of the toothpick has reached proportions that strike the foreign visitor with astonishment and disgust, and make the lives of many of our citizens anything but agreeable.

In no other country, it is said, have toothpicks been publicly used in private houses or in the presence of women. An English woman or a French woman of the better class not only never dreams of using a toothpick before people, but she considers it something that it is more pleasant not even to mention.

Points in Social Usages.

Never whisper in company. Never talk to one person across another, nor allow a servant to pass things in front of a person at

Send your visiting card in an envelope to the hostess at the time of a reception, but do not send regrets. It is customary to take leave of your host-
