He Stands Very High Among the Camp

Preachers of the Far West. Rev. Thomas A. Uzzell is, one of the best known of the mining camp preachers of the far west. His work has led him among the wildest and most deprayed inhabitants of Leadville and like settlements, and his work has invariably been such as to insure respect even from the most reckless. Often after a broil, in which some reckless creature had fallen before the oft used revolver, the parson would be called in to perform the last offices for the dead. Then would the strange gathering stand uncovered, tamed, in the presence of one who told them of the error of their ways, while sympathizing with their weakness as a brother might,

This singular man, so well fitted for the singular field in which he labors, is a native of Lebanon, Ills. Forty years ago he was a wild young fellow himself. He was a gambler and a horse racer, and it is said that he attended camp meetings for the purpose of pelting the worshipers with corn and peas. At 21 he reformed. write, Somewhat late in life he went to college, being graduated at Asbury university, Indiana, in 1875. The next year he was. ordained by Bishop REV. THOMAS A/UZZELL Simpson, and sent Leadville, when the place was a mere mining camp of 500 people. The morning after his arrival he started on a tour among the saloons and gambling places. The inmates laughed at him and invited him to take a drink or a hand at poker, but Uzzell began at once by filling his improvised cabin at evening service, and commenced to raise money with which to build a church. He first tried the miners, but not getting all he wanted he extended his solicitations to the gamblers and the women of the town. From these reckless people he met with a universal response. One saloon keeper offered him the proceeds of a keg of whisky, which Uzzell refused to accept. Having taken quite a collection in the saloon, a gambler, remarking that they had done the fair thing by the parson, insisted on his taking a drink. It appeared that Uzzell must either drink or fight, so he pulled off his coat, whereupon the stalwart bartender, who was something of a fighter himself, leaped over the bar and declared that he proposed to take a hand, and Uzzell needn't drink if he didn't want to. This restored

Mr. Uzzell tells a number of good stories anent queer weddings and funerals he has officiated at. Here is one concerning a wed-

" I have just been let out of jail, said the man who wished to be married, and borrowed a saw and buck and went in search of work. When I asked this woman here by my side for a job, she said she had no money to hire a man, being a poor widow woman. told her I would saw the wood and take her for pay, and she said "all right," and here we are now to get married, but I hain got no money, parson, to pay the bill.""

Mr. Uzzell performed the ceremony and paid the recorder's fee.

There was then a great deal of what was called lot jumping in Leadville. Mr. Uzzell secured some lots for his church. One day he found a jumper unloading logs for the purpose of building a cabin on these lots. Uzzell took off his coat and prepared to resist the and $4.50 to Three and a Half. jumper, who was beginning to unload a fresh lot of logs:

"If you get off that wagon I will thrash you," said the preacher. "Parson, you wouldn't fight, would you!"

replied the jumper. "I don't want to fight, but if you put another log on this lot I will thrash you, or you will me."

"Well, what do you want done?" "Drive away with the load of logs you now have and then haul off the others already on

The jumper concluded that Methodist property was not good pr perty to jump. W. H. Stevens, of the Iron mine, was a great friend of Uzzeil's, and on one occasion Stevens authorized some ladies to give a party, saying that he would pay for the refreshments, and suggesting that they sell tickets at $1 apiece, the proceeds to be given to Uzzell for his church. During the evening the parson stood at the door taking tickets. Suddenly he was called up stairs. There he found that Stevens had been smuggling champagne in the building. "I was too late," says Mr. Uzzell, "to stop the drinking, but I put an end to an intended dance. As I entered the room some one jumped on a chair and shouted out, 'Get your partners for the first dance!' That was Dick Allen, of The Leadville Reveille, one of the old newspapers in the camp. I interposed and said I would not permit any dancing at a Methodist social, and Dick did not urge the matter any further, but an Irishman present did. He said he had paid his dollar to get in and intended to dance. He insisted, notwithstanding my objections, and finally threatened to give me a thrashing if I interfered. I was expecting trouble, when Tabor, who afterward became United States senator, being present, interfered in my behalf and quieted the troublesome Irishman."

Mr. Uzzell is now in charge of the People's tabernacle at Denver, under the supervision of the Home Missionary society of New Missouri's New Governor.

Hon. A. P. Morehouse, the new governor of Missouri, vice Marmaduke, deceased, was born in Delaware county, O., July 11, 1835. He received only such schooling as naturally falls to farmers' boys, terminating his studies when he was 20 years of age. However, he made the best of whatever advantages he possessed, and became a teacher in Camden, Mo. Soon after he removed to Nodaway county, where he occupied whatever time was not devoted to teaching to studying law, and was admitted to practice the profession in 1860.

Governor Morehouse has always A. P. MOREHOUSE. been a Democrat, and for more than twentyfive years has been actively identified with the Democratic party of his state. He was a delegate to the national Democratic conventions of 1872 and 1876. He also served in the Twenty-ninth and Thirty-first general assemblies, being the presiding officer of the senate for two terms and a member of the Democratic state central committee of 1883 and 1883. Personally Governor Morehouse is tall and dark, his manners being mild and affable. He is an ardent prohibitionist.
