CHIEF TRICK EXPLAINED.

Short, but Merry Game Known by the Name "Birds Fly"-A Brief Description of Mount Vesuvius, the Well Known Volcano.

The Bay of Naples forms a crescent. The beautiful city of Naples is at one horn, and at the other, nine miles to the south, rises the well known volcano Mount Vesuvius. Vesuvius is a solitary mountain, rising majestically from the plain of Campania, having at the base a circumference of about thirty miles and dividing at a certain height into two summits. The height of Vesuvius is about 4,000 feet.

VESUVIUS IN ERUPTION. The first eruption recorded in history occurred in the year 79 A. D. Previous to this Vesuvius was not suspected to be a volcano. Its sides were covered with famous vines, and its ancient crater, partly filled with water, formed the stronghold of the rebel chief, Spartacus. It was at this eruption that the cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum were buried in the torrent of wind and ashes which was ejected, and that the elder Pliny was suffocated in the sulphurous vapor. Since that famous eruption Vesuvius has been an active volcano, and has been frequently in eruption, some sixty great and numerous small ones having taken place. Numbered with the most remarkable eruptions is the one that occurred in 1779, when Vesuvius, not content with rumbling noises and puffs of smoke, began to pour forth lava, then jets of red hot stones and ashes made their appearance, and increased in number and intensity until great volumes of white clouds rose from the crater to a height of four times that of the mountain. Following these clouds came columns of fire and streams of burning lava. A brilliant eruption, but one much less destructive than that above, occurred in 1878.

The Game of "Birds Fly."

"Did you ever play 'Birds Fly?" so asked one of Golden Days readers, and at once the rest were ready.

The leader laid the palms of his hands on his knees, and then lifting them suddenly exclaimed: "Birds fly! You must all follow me," he said. "Now then, birds fly, crows fly, bees fly, cats fly." He lifted his hands as he mentioned each animal, and the company did the same. "No, no," he cried, "cats don't fly. You must only lift you hand when it is something that flies. Try again. Birds fly, geese fly, hawks fly, brickbats fly." We were cautious this time and did not lift our hands at "brickbats fly," so we had to pay a forfeit, for brickbats do fly. Again we tried: "Birds fly, swallows fly, horse-fly." Again we were caught, the smart young man declaring that he only mentioned the creature's name, and did not say it flew. He was bound to make it wrong whichever way we did. There was very little to do. It was

The trick illustrated in the cut and described not long since in Golden Days, is an old one, but will be new to many of our young readers, and is furthermore an easy one to perform.

with which to play a trick. He asks permission to mark it so that the owner may know it again, but does this in an unexpected manner and to the distress of the owner, by apparently, snipping a piece out of the center with a pair of scissors.

Perceiving the owner's anxiety, the performer says: "Really, I am extremely sorry to have alarmed you, but there is no occasion for distress, I can easily repair the damage done," so saying he gives the handkere' of a rub between his hands and spreads it out. and shows it uninjured.

THE HANDKERCHIEF TRICK. The secret lies in the fact, as many of our wide awake readers doubless suspect, that the handkerchief was not cut at all. The performer has previously provided himself with a little piece of cambric, four inches square. This he takes by the center, with the corners hanging down, and places it in the left hand, clipped between the lowest roots of the fingers and the fleshy part of the palm, and with the folded angle pointing upward (viz: in the same direction as the thumb) as shown in the cut. Taking the borrowed handkerchief by the center with the other hand, he transfers it to the left, the center lying just over the little piece of cambric. He next, with the right hand, iraws up apparently the center of the handkerchief, but really the little piece of cambric, about an inch and a half beyond the hand, and snips this off with the scissors. In order to "restore" the handkerchief, therefore, all that is necessary is to get rid of the remaining portion of the little piece of cambric, which will be a very easy thing

THE CURIOSITY SHOP.

Some Information About Queen Victor ria's Name New to Most Readers. Now comes one who throws discredit on all previous stories as to the queen's family Queen Victoria has no other name than that given her in baptism. Her name is not Guelph. That was the baptismal name of an s ancestor. To say that her name is Guelph because she is a descendant of Guelph of Bavaria, or a member of the house of Guelph, is as ridiculous as to say that the name of a descendant of or member of the house of William the Conqueror is Williams. Nor is her name Wettin. That supposition is more ridiculous still than the "Guelph" superstition. She married a descendant of the counts of Wettin, but no descendant of the king of Bulgaria will ever be Mr. Bulgaria, and no descendant of the counts of Wettin ever be Mr. Wettin. It has not been necessary for all people to assume sarnames, and very few royal or princely families have taken them. Louis XVI was indicted as Louis Capet, but he informed the court that it was mistaken. as he had no surname, and on his authority it may safely be assumed that neither the house of Orleans nor the house of Bourbon enjoys that distinction. Charles Stuart of England came from the Stuart family and had a family name (changed to Stuart from Fitzalan), and so did Henry VII, grandson of Owen Tudor. The duke of Modena has none, and the duke of Bedford is Mr. Russell; the duke of Birkenhead has none, and the duke of Montrose is Mr. Graham.

The Beginning of Printing.

It is probable that the earliest impressions were taken by a mallet and planer (a smooth faced block of wood used for leveling the type before printing), as proof slips now often are, or by a brush, in the Chinese manner; but presses were soon invented for the purpose. There are engravings representing the press as it existed about 1520. It was large enough to print two folio pages, and for this two pulls were required. The force was applied by a simple screw and lever. About 1620 Blaeuw, of Amsterdam, produced a greatly improved press, which, with little alteration, continued in use for more than a century and a half. The press upon which Benjamin Franklin worked in London, in 1725, is preserved in the patent office at Washington. It is a clumsy structure, almost entirely of wood, known as the Ramage press, of which many were still in use more than a century later. Iron was subsequently used for some of the parts until the beginning of the present century. Printing machinery, now brought to such a high degree of perfection, was not much ahead of Franklin's time fifty years ago,

The First American Abolitionist. Samuel Sewall, chief justice of Massachusetts from 1718 to 1728, when he resigned on account of age and infirmities, seems to have been the first outspoken abolitionist in our country, having written a tract against slavery, in which he gave it as his opinion that there would be "no progress in gospeling" until slavery should be abolished. Judge Sewall was born at Bishopsgate, England, March 28, 1652, graduated at Harvard university in 1671, and died January, 1730. He studied divinity, preached awhile, came into the possession of wealth by marriage, by marrying the daughter of a Boston goldsmith, and was annually chosen a member of the council from 1690 until 1725. He was judge from 1713 until 1718, when he became chief justice. Judge Sewall shared in the general belief of witches and witchcraft, concurring in the condemnation of many of the accused, but he afterwards publicly acknowledged his Cremation.

The first furnace for the cremation in America of bodies of the dead was erected at Washington, Pa., in 1876, by Dr. F. J. Le Moine, at a cost of $1,600. The first cremation (that of Baron de Palm) took place Dec. 6 of the same year. The process occupied about two hours, and was very successful in its results. The ashes were placed in an urn. The process seemed objectionable to many, and some excitement was caused throughout the country. Since then crematories have been erected in several large cities, and the process of cremation is not regarded with much curiosity.

A Suggestion for Independence.

After the proclamation of King George III, in 1775, Joseph Hawley, one of the stanch patriots of New England, wrote from Watertown to Samuel Adams, in congress: "The eyes of all the continent are on your body to see whether you act with firmness and intre-The performer borrows a handkerchief pidity, with the spirit and dispatch which our situation calls for. It is time for your body to six on periodical annual elections, nay, to form into a parliament of two houses." This was the first proposition for the establishment of an independent national government for the colonies.

Cost of the Great Eastern.

The cost of building and launehing the Great Eastern was $3,650,000. That broke the original company before she was launched. A new company having been organized, the sum of $600,000 was spent in fitting and finishing her. When this company failed another with a capital of $500,-000 took hold of her, cleaned 300 tons of mussels off her bottom, and at the close of 1880 had sunk $280,000 in her, making a total outlay for construction and maintenance of over $4,500,000.

Velocity of Electricity. Electricity has no assignable velocity, This varies with the current and the conductor. Wheatstone, in 1833, seemed to show a transmission velocity of 288,000 miles a second through copper wire, but in late experiments signals were sent over ordinary telegraph wires on poles, and had a rate of only 14,000 to 16,000 miles. With wires near the earth the velocity was 12,000 miles, but reached 24,000 on very high wires.

The Suez Canal.

The Suez canal was opened in 1869. It is not yet fully completed, or rather is unperfected, and has a depth of twenty-six feet. Forty hours are required for the passage of a vessel. The tolls average $4,300 per vessel, and it is estimated that the saving to commerce, after deducting fees, will be $10,000,-000 annually. The British government purchased one-fifth of the number of shares from the khedive of Egypt in 1876.

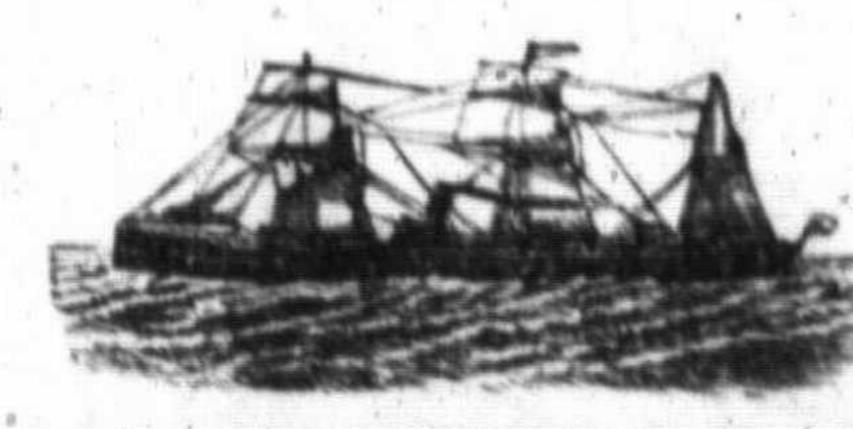

The Bible as the Law.

A convention of the settlers near Quidipiac, Conn., was held April 13, 1638, in a barn at that place. After some discussion the Bible was adopted as the constitution of the new colony and a settlement was established which was named New Haven. The Bible remained the constitution for several Varieties of Postage Stamps. Between 8,000 and 10,000 different postage stamps have been issued by the 300 governments of the world using them. A complete collection would probably number 10,000.

Beginning of the Fisheries Question. The Webster-Ashburton treaty of 1849 defined the boundary between the United States and the British American possessions
