FARMERS IN THE CITY.

THE TRAPS LAID FOR THEIR UNSUSPECTING FEET.

The Fact that Only One in Ten Thousand of Them Falls Into the Snare Speaks Well for Their Intelligence Perkins and Rogers.

The big papers of the big city that lies at the mouth of the Hudson river, and is called New York, have of late contained more than the usual number of references to that class of men known as "green goods" dealers and their victims.

"MR. AND MRS. PERRIN" IN COURT.

The occasional capture of a valuable prize by city sharps of some sort, has tended to give the dwellers in cities a somewhat low conception of the intelligence of the average countryman. But the fact is that not one in 10,000 of the people singled out for victims by the sharpers ever "bites."

And one reads of a city-dupe almost as often as a country victim.

But however much one may despise the character of the green goods man and his like, we must admit that he always puts the loser in the wrong. The latter thinks he is going to get something for nothing. In short, the victim is, at heart, a thief; he tries to swindle the dealer, and is himself swindled. The customer deliberately makes up his mind to violate the law and swindle his rural neighbors; he goes or sends to New York for counterfeit money, pays for it and gets—sawdust or greenbacks—or nothing? Between sharper and victim the moralities are equal; and, if public policy permitted, the honest public go on. But is it not an amazing thing that the swindled would be swindler should "sneak"—that he should deliberately appeal to that law he has been trying to violate? It shows that while the city rogue is a rogue only, the rural rogue is often both a rogue and a sneak.

"Green goods" men have been unusually active of late. The fate of the dealer slain by Texas Holland, and of others imprisoned, instead of inducing reform has caused the manipulators to adopt more secure methods. The methods are various, but we shall describe but one, and that because it is extremely ingenious and proved a brilliant success. On the 21 of December, 1883, the daily papers contained an item to the effect that the secret service officers of the United States treasury had seized a small painting in Theodore Stewart's saloon in New York city, said painting being an imitation of a $5 greenback, so perfect that to nineteen men out of twenty it looked exactly like a real greenback pasted on a smoothly polished block of wood. Even the miculage, which would naturally show around the edges of the bill, was so perfectly imitated that close observers would not believe it unreal till convinced by feeling. The artist was released with a reprimand and a marked warning to imitate something else in the future. Not many weeks after a news item went the rounds of the press that some government plates were lost or stolen—denomination of bills not stated.

Both items were bona fide, but at this point the "operator" comes in. Shortly after, when the news had had time to filter into the most remote settlement, various parties in the rural regions of Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky received circulars, delicately calling their attention to the foregoing news items and suggesting that "some business might be done." If the receiver was ordinarily honest he threw the circular aside as one of the innumerable "fakes" with which patent medicine men and others are perpetually flooding the west. But if he was a trifle dishonest and not very talented he "bit." Correspondence followed, and the "operator" soon had a list of "good names." Indeed, the way in which New York sharpers and "fakers" secure lists of approachable men and possible victims in the country, is one of the most curious things in the annals of fraud. It is highly probable that the most expert "operators" have confederates in various places who look up "safe men" for them. Suffice it that when enough preliminary work had been done, each victim received a circular or a similar circular letter:

DEAR SIR—Your name and address was given to me by my confidential agent, who said he thought that you were a man in position to handle my goods in safety, so I concluded to write to you. If I have made a mistake do me no harm and let matters drop. My motto is never harm a man who is willing to prove himself a friend. My business is not exactly legitimate, but the green articles I deal in are safe and profitable to handle. The sizes are $1, $2, $5, $10—do you understand? I cannot be plainer until I know you. I mean business, and if you conclude to answer this letter I will send you full particulars and terms, and I will endeavor to satisfy you on every point; that if you are my friend I will prove a true and lasting one to you. Remember, I want simply to convince you that I am just as say—a friend to a friend. When you write be sure to return this letter; then I will have confidence in you. Never send registered letter, as I will not sign for any; and be sure and send me your name and post-office address, as I might lose the one I now have before hearing from you again. I can and will help you out of any money troubles you are in, and no one on the face of this earth need be the wiser unless you betray me. Trusting that you will take no offense from the above, I remain, yours in confidence, G. LEWIS, 1885 Broadway, New York City (box 10).

Of course the swindlers change their address frequently and employ many devices to evade the police. From this point the "operator" works according to the degree of the victim's gullibility. If the latter sends the money—usually $100 for $1,000 in counterfeits, but sometimes as much as $400 for $1,000 printed from the alleged "government plates"—the sharper pockets it and that's the last of it. If the victim goes to New York, any one of a score of devices is employed. Sometimes he goes to the secret room by appointment, to pay for and receive the "goods," and is simply knocked senseless and robbed outright. Sometimes good money is counted out in his presence and he pays the stipulated price for it; it is then done up in a package and put in his valise, as he supposes, but by a skillful twist of the wrist the "operator" substitutes a package of waste paper. This was the game attempted upon "Texas" Holland, but he grabbed the real money and shot the "operator" dead when the latter tried to recover it. In some cases a bogus policeman rushes in and arrests both; the "operator" begs for mercy and the victim joins him in buying off the supposed officer. Many other devices are employed, but it is a fact worth noting that these pretended counterfeiters never keep counterfeit money either on their person or about their premises.

The real counterfeiter usually proceeds much more cautiously, and has professional "concocters" all over the country to circulate his goods. And it is a sad commentary on human nature (some men's nature) that an expert counterfeiter is almost always a man of talents that would make him rich in a legitimate business. Sometimes, however, though not often, the real counterfeiter uses circulars. Here is one that is extensively distributed in Canada and the northeast:

DEAR SIR—Your address was sent to me by my confidential agent, who is trusted to select a few discreet and reliable men in each State to take hold of and push the sale of a certain class of "goods" in which I am dealing and in which there is big money. As we are strangers I will simply say that "goods" is what I have for sale. The sizes are 1, 2, 5, 10 and 20, and the following are my terms, viz.: one thousand in my goods costs one hundred and fifty dollars. Five thousand will only cost four hundred dollars. If you wish to obtain a supply drop me a line at once and state when it would be convenient for you to come on here and see me, (as I only deal) personally and face to face. I will then send you all the necessary instructions. It will be useless for you to send for samples, the "goods" speak for themselves. Come on and examine them before you invest one cent of your money, then I will show you how you can make a snug little fortune safely, if you only keep your own counsel. There is a party in this city also in this business that used to be in my employ. No doubt you might hear from him. If you ask him for a sample, to get your trade he will send you a piece of genuine money. If so, take it to any bank and you will find that I am telling you the truth. And when you come to see him he will show you goods not fit to handle. If you like honest dealings come and see me. Don't let the expense of coming keep you away, for I will allow you all that when we meet. I don't want one cent of your money before you examine my stock. To show me that you won't try and harm me please return this letter, and you take off my address. Faithfully, GEO. COLEMAN, 405 E. 34th St., New York.

PERKINS AND ROGERS.

Expert as these men are they are nearly always run to earth at last. Within the past five years the treasury has discovered counterfeiters surpassing in skillful execution all before known; yet the criminals have nearly all been detected. But if a green goods man are not so easily caught. They always plead that they only advertise "green goods," not counterfeit money, and no case has yet come up in the New York courts in which they have been convicted of any infraction of the laws. We give a cut of "Mr. and Mrs. Perrin," or "Jones," as they were called, who were recently arrested with green goods circulars in their possession. They went into court unconcerned and left the presence of the justice without conviction. A feature of their appearance was the presence of "Baby Perrin," shown in the cut.

We also present sketch portraits of Deacon Asbury H. Perkins, of Lancaster, S. C., and William Rogers, a well known green goods man. Perkins is a high official at home, and he lately went to Boston, where he deposited $200,000 of his county's money. On his way home he passed through New York and learned about the "green goods" business, raised $400 and went back to get $4,000 worth of the goods from Rogers. The latter met Perkins at the depot, being less careful than usual. Perkins made a sorry showing in court, as he had to admit that he bought the goods intending to pass them off on his more honest neighbors.

CHARLES WILLIAM MOULTON.

He Was an Officer in the Union Army and a Figure in Politics.

Although the prominent men of the civil war period are fast passing away, especially those then prominent in civil life, the recent death of Charles William Moulton is almost the first break in that remarkable group which includes the Shermans, Gen. Tom Ewing, and some others—all closely related by blood or marriage. While one Sherman was on the bench, another in the senate, and another commanding 100,000 men in the field, one of their brothers-in-law, Gen. Ewing, was also in active service; another, Col. Moulton, was the great manager of supplies from Cincinnati southward, and his son-in-law, Capt. C. H. Rockwell, was also in the field. It was a remarkable family coterie, and Col. Moulton was the first member of it to die.

Charles W. Moulton was born Dec. 16, 1830, near Cleveland, O., and spent his boyhood on a farm, acquiring a fairly good education at the academy. He studied law in the intervals of work on the farm and in a store at Medina, O., and at the age of 21 was admitted to the bar. Soon after he entered on the practice at Mansfield, O., where he married Miss Frances Sherman, sister of the future general and senator.

When the war began he was living at Toledo, and was thence appointed captain and quartermaster, remaining in that service in West Virginia during McClellan's advance, and afterward serving with Fremont, Reynolds and Pope. In 1863 he was made lieutenant colonel and afterward colonel, and as such had charge of the Cincinnati depot of supplies for the rest of the war, purchasing for all the armies between the Alleghanies and Mississippi. When the war ended he settled in Cincinnati as partner of Judge M. H. Linden in law practice; and afterward formed the partnership of Moulton & Levy, in which he remained till death. He became very prominent in treasury cases, especially those concerning tobacco and whisky frauds, and in 1880 was the recognized manager of the Sherman forces, in the Chicago convention. He leaves one son, Sherman Moulton, of New York City, and three daughters—Mrs. H. R. Probusco and Mrs. W. J. Haldeeman, of Cincinnati, and Mrs. Rockwell, wife of Capt. C. H. Rockwell, of the United States army.

Her Celluloid Comb. A lady of Carmi, Ills., while combing her hair the other evening accidentally thrust the comb in a gas jet near the mirror. The comb was of celluloid and flashed into flame like powder, setting fire to her hair and giving her a narrow escape from serious injury. —Brooklyn Eagle.

Next summer the corner stone of the Adoniram Judson Memorial church will be laid at Mandalay, India. The church will cost $10,000, a large part of which has been subscribed by Burmese Christians.

GALLOWAY'S GREETING

Peace on earth, good will towards men. Is the theme of our earthly song; Peace on earth, good will towards men Should mould our actions all day long. It should lead us think how best to bring The happy smile, the cheerful ring Of laughter to the cheerless hearth, And thus make glad this dreary earth. The way is plain: see GALLOWAY'S Furs. There neither cats skin, sheep, nor curs, But just the thing to keep you warm; To keep you free from cold and storm. Which must bring peace in this cold clime, and make your Christmas a happy time.
