May 21, 1803. RICE. at in the navy, en by the delendant. And as to the offence iself he observed: This offence in modern times is so frequent, that it is become alarming to the public, and induces me to suspect, that men either are not aware of the consequences the offence may lead to, or are become insensible to the mischiefs of them. That fighting a duel is a grievous breach of the peace is undoubted, and that it ought to be so considered is as clear; inasmuch as it may lead to one of the worst of crimes, murder; the murder of one probably, and possibly of more. I lay stress upon the word murder, because I fear some are ignorant, and others will perversely not understand, that to kill a man in a duel amounts to the crime of DELIBERATE MURDER, whether he

By sir Matthew Hale, as correct, as learned, and as humane a judge as ever graced a bench of justice, we find it laid down (a) that if A challenge C to meet in the field to fight, and C decline it as much as he can, but is threatened by A to be posted for a coward, (an ingredient to be found I fear in this case in substance, though not in terms) if he meet C and D his service is to the East Indies for the purchase of commodities which, on importation, have been nearly unsaleable from the glut produced by the too extensive competition—Can Courant.

TUESDAY, SEPTRADIA. (an ingredient to be found I fear in this case in substance, though not in terms) if he meet not; and thereupon A and B his second, and C and D his second, meet and fight, and C kill A; this is murder in C and D his second, and so ruled in raverner's case; (b) in which case, tried before this court of K. B, in which case, tried before this court of K. B. in this place, it appeared that the deceased was the challenger, and that the prisoner accepted the challenge, as the case terms it, upon very forcible provocation.

It will be seen by His Royal Highness the Prince Regents' speech, that Parliament was prorogued on the 13th July.

same opinion were the rest of the court. In knowledging the zealous & persevering ef-this case it is to be observed, that the second, forts which his royal highness had made one rhomas Mugrave, as well as the princi-for accomplishing the total annihilation of this case it is to be observed, that the second, one rhomas Mugrave, as well as the principal, was indicted, and the second outlawed. This precedent may well deter others from taking upon them so illegal and improper an office. And such has been the law recognised at different times down to the present moment, as we may observe by what is laid down by a very learned and able judge (d) of the last reign; his words are, 'that in all possible cases deliberate homicide upon a principle of revenge, is murder; for no man possible cases deliberate homicide upon a principle of revenge, is murder; for no man under the protection of the law is to be the avenger of his own wrongs. If they are of such a nature, for which the laws of society will give him adequate remedy, thither he ought to resort; but be they of what nature soever, he ought to bear his lot with patience, and remember that vengeance belongeth only to the Might High.' Then he goes only the inhabitants and military of that city, they were carried on board the steam boat Malsham, to be conveyed to Quebec His Grace did not die at Richmond, as stated in our last, but at a small house within about three miles of that place.

A Savings Bank has been established in the city of Montreal, and will go into immediate operation. This institution promises to be of infinite advantage to those for whose benefit it is intended, and we hope the most sanguine expectations of its promoters will be realised.

Suicide—Yesterday a man named Amavine, whatever his motive may be.' Here too we may note this excellent man's opinion upon that punctilio of honor, by the rules of which some men affect to palliate and other than the same men affect to palliate and the sam ble La Rue, a baker, put an end to his life of which some men affect to palliate and others to justify crimes of the blackest dye, the grossest frauds, gambling, seduction, adulterly, murder. Such was and is the law of honor, and no man who will attend to the subject can doubt of it. In this case, if the prosecutor had not obeyed the law, by consulting his own honor, and not the false honor of swordsmen, and either party hed fallen, the other would have undoubtedly been guilty of murder, and liable to an ignominious and fat tal sentence: from which had it been his fortune to escape, either from absence of witnesses or any other means that sometimes occur to cause a failure of public justice, the remainder of his life must have been clouded with the dreafful remembrance that for the purpose of giving or receiving that miserable thing falsely caffed satisfaction, he had unnecessarily imbrued his hands in the blood of a brother officer. Fortunately for the defendant, that crime he has not to atone for he is to receive sentence only for attempting to provoke a duel; the punishment of his offence as a misdemeanor is discretionary, and must be guided by such circumstances of agravation or mitigation as are to be found in the offence.

He then adverted to the particular circumstances of the case, annongst which were see the offence.

He then adverted to the particular circumstances of the case, amongst which were several of a nature to mitigate very materially the offence, accompanied by affidavits of the defendant's general merits as an officer from many respectable officers of the navy; though there still remained, as he observed, much for which atonement should be made to the public for the intended violation of the peace. Wherefore upon the whole the conrt, taking into consideration the imprisonment already suffered by the defendant, (who had been brought up early in the term, and committed to custody in the mean time) adjudged him to pay a fine of 100l and to be imprisoned for one calendar month, and at the expiration of that time to give security to keep the peace for three years, himself in to keep the peace for three years, himself in 1000l and two sureties in 250l each, and to be further imprisoned until such fine were paid and securities given.

The commissioners of the Halifax dockyard have sailed for England, the dock-yard having been disbanded, the naval hos-pital broken up, and all the officers dis-charged, except the storekeeper. TRADE TO INDIA. It is stated by one of the London papers that the American trade to India is much greater than that of Great Britain in crime of DELIBERATE MURDER, whether he that gave or he that accepted the challenge fall. Of the same opinion were the rest of the court. In knowledging the zealous & persevering efticase it is to be observed that the second.

It is with great regret that I am again obliged to announce to you the continuance of his Majesty's lamented indisposition.

I cannot close this session of parliament without expressing the satisfaction that I have derived from the zeal and assiduity with which you have applied yourselves to the several important objects which have come under your consideration.

Your patient and laborious investigation of the state of the circulation and currency of the kingdom demands my warmest acknowledgments; and I entertain a confident expectation that the measures adopted, as the result of this enquiry, will be productive of the most beneficial consequences.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,
I thank you for the supplies which you have granted for the service of the present year. I sincerely regret that the necessity should have existed of making any addition to the burthen of the people; but I anticipate the most important permanent advantages from the effort which you have thus made for meeting at once all the financial difficulties of the country; and I derive much satisfaction from the belief that the means which you have devised for this purpose are calculated to press as lightly on all the classification.

was brought up in custody on this day to receive sentence, after judgment by default upon an information filed against him for having sent a letter to his superior officer, provoking him to fight a duel with him, in consequence of certain charges thrown out against him by the other reflecting upon his character and conduct while serving as an officer under him, and of certain acts done by the superior officer tending to degrade the defendant in the eyes of the crew.

Grose J. in passing sentence upon the defendant censured strongly several circumstances of provocation on the part of the prosecutor, which had led to the challenge given by the defendant. And as to the offence itself he observed: This offence in modern inations of those, whose projects, if successful, could only aggravate the evils which it is professed to remedy, and who under pretence of reform, have really no other object but the subversion of our happy constitution.
