COUGHS AND CONSUMP. TIONS.

THE high reputation that Anderson's COUGH DROPS and PECTORAL POWDERS have gained for Coughs and other affections of the breast and lungs leading to consumption, renders it unnecessary to say much in recommending them to the public, as no stronger proof of their possessing uncommon virtues could be given than will be found by reading the Certificates accompanying each bottle, given by those of the first respectability, who have used them in cases of long standing; and some of them, where their physicians had given them up as past recovery, have been entirely restored by they have not been in use five years, and that the demand the present season has been much greater than at any former period is also a strong argument in their favour. Thousands have shortened their days by neglecting coughs when first at-tacked, which have soon terminated in a seated Consumption, and proved fatal.—
Scarcely a case of Colds, Coughs, Pain in the side, difficulty of breathing, want of sleep arising from debility, or even con sumptions but may be relieved by a time ly use of this Healing Balsam. Each dollar bottle of this medicine contains a bout 40 doses, which proves them to be a cheap medicine, considering their virtues. NEW CERTIFICATES.

I hereby certify, that for more than a year previous to 1821, I was afflicted with a troublesome and alarming cough, which rendered me unable to labour or even to walk many rods without causing profuse sweating, and after trying many things without relief, I obtained a vial of Anderson's Cough Drops, from the use of which I soon found great relief, so as to be able to resume and continue my usual labour, and I have reason to believe that that the and I have reason to believe that that the use of them was the means of saving my life, as I had but little hopes of recovering again when I commenced taking them, and think them undoubtedly the best meand think them undoubtedly the best meand think them undoubtedly the lungs. dicine in use for complaints of the lungs. Hudson, May 20th, 1823. This is to certify that I the subscriber had been afflicted with the Asthma for twenty years, and the paroxisms were often so violent as nearly to deprive me of breath. During one of the most violent returns of the Asthma I was advised to try Anderson's Cough Brops, and I did so, and to my surprise, I was very soon entirely relieved, and felt no more of it for six months—Upon a return of a parox-ism of the Asthma, I have made use of the the same medicine and it has invariably given me relief. As it respects the asthma, and its attendant symptoms, difficulty of breathing, &c. I consider Anderson's Cough Drops a remedy, in praise of which too much cannot be said. I further certify, that my son-in law had for some time been supposed to be past reovery of a contract.

COMPUNICATIONS.

MR. THOMSON,

I am always willing to allow praise where it is due, and should be ready to bear testimony to the merits of the Methodists. testimony to the merits of the Methodists, were it not made unnecessary, by the sounding report of one of the brethren themselves, who signs himself a "Scotch Methodist," who I cannot help thinking would have shown as much modesty, if he had left out the words " if not valianter"—to my mind it smells a little of egotism.

Let me ask your correspondent to lay his hand upon his 'art and say, if he does not think in his conscience, that if the Royal Guards of England, and Blucher's Cavalry at the battle of Waterloo had happened to have been all Presbyterians, instead of all Methodists, the result would have been the same? I trust every candid person, let his same? I trust every candid person, let his religious persuasion be what it may, will allow that it would.

I have seen, and fought alongside of Methodists, and will not deny that they possess uncommon bravery, but what of that! it is their enthusiastic devotion that inspires them: I have no idea that in other respects uncommon bravery, but what of that it is their enthusiastic devotion that inspires them; I have no idea that in other respects they are any better menthan others. They are altogether too hot in battle, and fight with a kind of frenzy which inspires terror to their enemies. It is not that they kill them so much as make them run away.—
The courage of the Presbyterians appears to me of a different kind; they seem to wait the approach of the enemy, with sullen cool determination; and never rise into madness till the Methodists (of which there are great numbers in every Scotch regiment) till the Methodists (of which there are great numbers in every Scotch regiment) have spread the contagion. Then the enc my have to look out, and indeed they are generally cunning enough to run away, which I think is a great disadvantage and might be remedied by the Government's culling out the Methodists from the Presbyterians, and embodying them separately, and the consequence would be, that the Methodists would make their enemies run, while the Presbyterians would kill all theirs. Every man of sense can judge which is the best for the Country.

"He that fights and runs away May lilve to fight another day."

I can bear testimony to the truth of this old saying, for one day, as our regiment, was charged by a column of French Grenadiers, I happened to be fortunate enough to kill my man outright. On the right of me stood a of the city of Montreal has by his Letter of Attorney dated the 24th ult, duly appointed the undersigned his agent in Upper Canada, and has by the same instrument revoked all former latters of Attorney, granted by him, and declared the same to be of no effect from the date above mentioned.

FRAN's. WM. REEVES.

Kingston, 2d February, 1824.

Charged by a column of French enough to kill my man outright. On the right of me stood a little whipper snapper of a methodist wresting with a huge grenadier with big whiskers, which gave his face the semblance of a hedge-hog in a rage. Their precess had been both dexterously warded so that neither had done the other injury, and they were fairly at fisty cuffs, when the methodist keeping fism hold of his piece with his right hand, with his left seized the Frenchman's right whisher. his left seized the Frenchman's right whis-ker, and with an unaccountable jerk, drag-ged it away skin and all, as effectually as an indian would have taken off a scalp. The disconcerted Frenchman gave a roar, drop-ped his musquet, turned his back and ran off too quickly for my little ager faced neigh-bour to salute his breech with the ateel.

This all happened as it were in the twink-ling of an eye, m a much shorter time than has been took to tell it, but the most provoking part of the business remains still to be told. If my memory serves king part of the business remains still to be told. If my memory serves, me, I think it was the third day after, at any rate I am positive it did not exceed the fourth, my one whiskered geattlemen was at bayone, spoints with me; I had again killed the man in front of me, when the ugly monster stepped into his place, and before I could disengage my bayonet, from the body of the defunct, this half-shorn Goliah had the point of his in contact with my shoulder blade, and ill indeed would it have fared with me, if my neighbour the Methodist, having killed his man, and seeing my peril, had not plunged neighbour the Methodist, having killed his man, and seeing my peril, had not plunged his bayonet up to the socket in his side.

This I think proves the folly of letting one's enemies run away, for certainly if that horrid grenadicr (I think I see him now) had been killed at once, instead of his only loosing a whisker, he would never have returned to pluk me in the shoulder, which even to this day, on the approach of falling weather evers me acute pain.

to this day, on the approach of falling weather gives me acute pain.

Your correspondent it must be acknowledged, is right erough when he says that the Kirkers form but a moderate portion of the Scottish people, and I think it is to be accounted for in this way. The Clergy of the Kirk having a regular settled stipend, independent of their congregations, have not the same motives for exertion in their calling as the clergy of the Seceders, who being paid by their congregations, are in a manner compelled to earn their livelihood by a laborious attention to their duties. A Clergy man of the Kirk for instance, will sometimes preach for not more than half an hour, and never more than an hour, and be as cool as preach for not more than half an hour, and never more than an hour, and be as cool as a cucumber the whole time; whereas I have heard a mountaineer preach three hours, and thirteen minutes by the watch, and he was all in a lather for at least two hours and a half, and the Chapel was througed, so that is would have been difficult for another to have thrust his hand into it. This shows the benefit of making the Clergy depend on their congregations for their support, & as I have a great veneration for the Kirk, I heartily wish to see it able to draw such vast congregations great veneration for the Kirk, I heartily wish to see it able to draw such vast congregations together, as I have seen at the Seceders' Chapels, instead of having the mortification to see its ministers preaching to empty pews; which I am convinced can never take place, if ever the Clergy of the Kirk get a share of the reserves of this Province, which Mr. Morris has injudiciously endeavoured to procure for them.

Mr. Morris's intentions may be very good. and kind, and unquestionably he is not a-ware of the mischief he would bring upon the Kirk. I do not hesitate to say he is a mistaken man, and that instead of doing goo to the Kirk, he would do it the most serious injury imaginable. Surely that gentleman must remamber what our great countryman Dundas once said in the British House of Commons, that the best security of the Kirk was its being founded on the rock of pover-ty. Then let every devout friend of the Kirk pray that its foundation may never be shifted from that enduring rock, to the de-luding quicksands of rich benefices, and clerluding quicksands of rich benences, and clergy reserves.

I will not be behind my countryman the "Scotch Methodist" in calling on all good Kirkers to join in petitioning his Majesty not to grant their clergy a single acre of land. And that the Reserves may no longer be a temptation to invasion, or a bone of contention among the various denomination of Protestants, it would be well if all with one accord, would attend to the invitation held out testants, it would be well if all with one accord, would attend to the invitation held out in the speech of our good and worthy governor, to petition the King to turn his Royal attention to "the vils arising from unoccupied and neglected lands" It is the only way as Sir Perigrine Maitland wisely foresees, to give aniversal content, and preserve future peace among men.

A KIRKER.

Sin,
Your friend Alasco would fain prove himself a firm prop of the Church of England, or as he would make it out, our Established Church. He makes many appeals to candour, while, with an egregious want of it, he bolts out "the writer before want of it, he bolts out "the writer before alluded to (a Church-of-England man) is very much mistaken if he thinks the levelling system, which he seems to be an advocate for, will take here." Mr. Alasco must be a poor silly elf, if he thinks such trashy declamation as this will take here. Let him anmation as this will take here. Let him answer me with argument, not with the hue and cry of "Leveller"! This is a mode of knocking down an opponent, only resorted to by the weak advocates of a weak cause; happily for mankind it has begun to lose its force, even in Europe; and on this continent, I trust it will ever excite that universal indirection it so institute were.

I trust it will ever excite that universal indignation it so justly merits.

In one sense I may truly be called a leveller, for I heartily desire to see the tall trees of our dark forests levelled with the ground, and burnt up into potash for the English market. Perhaps in Mr. Alasco's opinion, he is a leveller, who would like to see all the devout followers of God, equal in the sight of God and the law: nay, it so appears, so I am indeed a leveller, for such is the first wish of my heart.

Now for a specimen of Mr. Alasco's most

Now for a specimen of Mr. Alasco's most sweet reasoning. "He (the Church of En-
