The claims of your honorable house on your petitioners, derive additional strength from the incident, that they room for the uninstigated generosity of your honorable house to disclose itself, and it attracts upon this petition all that notice which is due to a first claim, while your ionorable house possessed the power we felt confident of its exercise to our own benefit and we never appeared to petition for what was conceded without request, but now that your authority as regards us is exhausted, we solicit your intercession, where we

HORRIBLE OUTRAGE.

It is this day our painful duty to record an act of the most cold-blooded and base nature that ever stained the character of humanity-one which is without a parallel in this country, and which from its dastardly attrocity might hold a conspicious place in the annals of a savage nation. On the eve-We His Majesty's faithful subjects, pro-fessing the Roman Catholic Religion, beg Robert Watson, Esquire, of this city, was sitting in a room on the first floor of his house, in company with the Rev. Mr. Mathieson, of St. Andrew's Church, and in the act of reading a newspaper, the report of a gun was heard at the window, and immediately the house was filled with smoke. Mr. Watson started up and exclamed "What's that," at the same time placing his hand upon his right side. On first hearing the noise law. THE HERALD.

KINGSTON, APRIL 10, 1827.

THE DUKE OF YORK .- Among the characteristic traits of the late Duke of York, there were two, which have commanded the applause of the nation & the world; his laudable ambition to promote the respectability, improvement, and comfort of the Army; and the impartiality with which he administered the patronage of his high office,

In every free government there will be political parties, one of which, for the time being, will have a more or less decisive ascendency; and it is too often the narrow policy of the possessors of power, in all governments, to bestow official favours solely or principally upon men of their own party, to the exclusion of those of equal or superior merit, who are in opposition to them. To the honor of the late Royal Duke, it is admitted by his political opponents, that he adopted and practised a more just and liberal policy. His example, in this respect, is worthy of imitation not only of his successors in the situation of Commander in Chief of the Army, but also of all administrators of Governments.
