Of the Venerable John Strachan, D. D. Archdeacon of York, in the Legislative Council, Thursday 6th March, 1828; on the subject of the Clergy Reserves.

(Continued from our last.) In June 1826, His Majesty's Government agreeable to the Memorial of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, and to the Address of the House of Assembly, founded on their Resolutions of December 1823, granted a provision to the Clergy of the Church of Scotland—not waiting, as was at first intended, either for the final adjustment of the claim made by the Scottish Clergy on of the claim made by the Scottish Clergy on the Reserves, nor for the establishment of a Society in Scotland for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign parts. I have reason to believe, that the King's Government thought as I certainly did think, that this Royal Grace would set the question at rest, as far as regarded the Scotch Clergy. A provision was all they desired; and having provision was all they desired; and having provision was all they desired; and having obtained it, there was nothing more for them to ask: Indeed, to ask for support from the Reserves, which as yet yield little or nothing, was unreasonable, and was giving up a certainty for an uncertainty. I am, at the same time, willing to believe, that had the friends of the Scotch Church foreseen, as they easily might, for they were told that it would be the case, that the claim advanced by them to participate, as a Protestant Clergy, in these Reserves, evidently set apart for the Established Church of England, would induce all the other Protestant denominainduce all the other Protestant denomina have paused before they made it—and yet, when I see their Advocates, without waiting for a reply, bringing forward the resolutions of last session of the Provincial Parliament, for the sale of the Reserves, I am at a loss what to think or believe. Had they been consistent in their object, they would have repeated the address of 1822 till an answer had been elicited—in fact, the prayer had been granted, and was soon after promulgated in this Conloy. Every body knows, that when an address is not answered so soon as we expect, it is not unusual to ed so soon as we expect, it is not unusual to renew it; nor is any change made in the request. Before leaving this part of the subject, I think it just to remark, that the Church of England, through the whole contest, has been acting entirely on the defensive. She has never attacked others but all Protestant denominations have attacked her.—She has suffered all sorts of revileings her.—She has suffered all sorts of revileings without complaint, and her Clergy have borne the most atrocious calumnies with patient forbearance—Sueh is the history of the progress of the opposition to the Clergy Reserves: and His Majesty's Government must see, that in giving way at all in a matter which till very recently was never agitated, they will not quiet expectations, but rather encourage discontent, unless they give way altogether and leave the Church of England on a level with other denominations.

That the Church of England is, by law, the Established Church in this Province, will sufficiently appear from a very few ob-

At the capitulation of the Province of Quebec, General Amherst granted the free exercise of the Roman Catholic Religion, but the obligation of paying tithes he left to the King's pleasure. His Britannic Majesty, by the treaty of peace, agreed to grant the liberty of the Roman Catholic Religion to the inhabitants of Canada, and grant the liberty of the Roman Catholic Religion to the inhabitants of Canada, and promised to give the most effectual orders that his new subjects might profess the worship of their religion according to the rights of the Romish Church, and in as far as the laws of Great Britain permitted. Now these laws at that time permitted only the Protestant Church of England to be established in any of the Colonies, for by the 1st of Elizabeth, cap. 1, the Protestant religion was established in every Colony the moment it became subject to the Crown of Great Britain, whether there was any proclamation to that effect or not. This Act relates not only to all the Queen's dominions, but is extended by positive words to such countries and places as should at any future time be subject to the crown of England. By which words it is quite evident, that the Establishment of the Church of England in every colony, was considered by the Legislature as an indespensible part of the general policy of the Imperial Government, and was intened to take effect in all countries that extend the made, or should thereafter make
