THE GRAVE. How sweet to sleep where all is peace, Where sorrow cannot reach the brea Where all life's throbbings cease, And pain is failed to rest:— Escaped o'er fortune's troubled wave, To anchor in the silent grave.

That quiet land, where, peril past,
The weary win a long repose,
Where the bruised spirit finds, at last,
A balos for all its woes—
And lowly grief and lordly pride
Lie down, like brothers, side by side!

The breath of slander cannot come
To break the calm that lingers the
There is no dreaming in the tomb,
Nor waking to despair!
Unkindness cannot wound us more,
And all earth's bitterness is o'er.

There the maiden waits till the lover come,
Where they never more may part;
And the stricken deer hath gained her hom
With the arrow in her heart:
And passion's pulse hes hushed and still,
Beyond the reach of the Tempter's skill.

The mother—she hath gone to sleep,
With her babe upon her breast—
She hath no weary watch to keep,
Over her infant's rest;
His alumbers on her bosom fair,
Shall never more be broken—there. The lovely, and the dearly loved— The lovely, and the dearly loved— From whom the touch of time hath reft The hearts which time hath proved; Whose guerdon was—and is—despair, For all I hore, and all I bear.

Why should I linger idly on, Amid the selfish and the cold; A dreamer—when such dreams are gone As those I sursed of old! Why should the dead tree mock the spring A blighted and a withered thing!

How blest—how blest, that home to gain, And slumber in that dreamless sleep, From which we never rise to pain, Nor ever wake to weep!

To win our way from the tempest's roar, And lay us down on the golden shore!

From the Token for 1832. WHAT IS LIFE. WHAT IS LIFE.

What is life? Saith the sage, we are born but to die!
We live for a summer, but cannot tell why;
And the strong and the feeble, the plans and the fair,
All go in the winter, we cannot tell where.
What is life? Saith the preacher, we live and we die,
Permitted to flutter, but hardly to fly;
And hereafter we live, as in this world we do,
Eather false and deceiful, or faithful and true.
What is life? Saith the lover, a season of bliss,
And all bliss and all life is compressed in a kiss;
To live, is to love—to be scorned, is to die—
I revive with a kiss, and expire in a sigh.
What is life? Saith the soldier, 'tis glory, my son,
The forts that are storned, and the fields tha are won;
'Tis thunder and pillage, 'tis glory and strife,
What is life? Saith the miser, 'tis twenty per cent;
'Tis a mortgage foreclosed; it is premium and rent;
While his heir will asseverate, 'Powder my wig!
'Tis to dress, and to driuk, and drive fast in a gig'
What is life? Saith my dame, to be seen and admired;
To be toasted as belle, to be honoured as wife;
This, this is the end and enjoyment of life.
What is life? Saith the statesman, political rank.
Saith the merchant, oh no, it is credit in bank.
Saith the mayer, 'tis weight with the jury and judge;

a city now destroyed by the sea, once exceeded in magnificence the present capital of France. The same story is related in Cornwall and Someriset. On the coast of North Wales, the present inhabitants say that about the year 500 A. D., a great number of cities and the whole of a tract called the Lowland Hundred were destroyed, and now form part of the Bay of Cardigan. On the coast of Suffiolk, Dunwich, or the splendid city, is said formerly to have contained 52 churches and monasteries, which have been swallowed up by the sea; at present.

Religious Refuge.—The Pope of Rome has lately published an edict which has made him very unpopular. It institutes an asylum for assassins in Ostia, and some other unhealthy towns, about 10 leagnes from Rome, with a view of increasing their population, though, it is to be feared, at the eminent risk of travellers passing near them.

Upon the case of the Headford peerage being called on in the House of Lords on Wednesday, Sir William Betham, the ulster king-at-arms, appeared at the bar as agent for the petitioners. The Lord Chancellor, upon learning who he was, 'Wha! a herald acting as an agent! I never heard of such a thing. Your business is to walk in processions, and the house cannot hear you. Sir.'
