

VARIETIES.

From the London Examiner. THE BRITISH.—Ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky, and of the earth; but how is it that ye do not discern this time? Ye, and why even of yourselves judge ye not what is right?

Since the wine rushed into the sea, was there ever a gregarious movement of self-destruction like that which has fixed the indignation of the country? How would such as they have acted when the Lord scourged those that bought, and those that sold, from the Temple? Surely they would have thrust the dead in his face, they would have been as twenty to one against the purification. But they have acted consistently. The successors of the Apostles are not to be looked for in palaces and purple. They whose state is a practical denial of the Scripture they profess to teach, may well set their wills against the rights of the people. Such men would never have renounced their worldly goods to follow a divine reformer, but would surely have ranged themselves with the party who opposed Pilate only when he spoke the words of mercy and justice. The coil of wealth has doubtless corrupted their holy office; they illustrate nothing so practically as the imposition of hands. Had innocent Mammon been by process of clutching and scraping, waxed a Diva. Frequent example is made of the wisdom of those that lived in the infancy of the world; but the authorities are of equal uncertainty. There is however, gospel evidence of the blessed state of the Apostles, and to their successors can hardly object to return. The maxim stare in antiqum, is often in their mouths; but one would think the old ways were Lombard street or the Stock Exchange; let us, for the love of charity place them on the oldest and most sacred ways to be traced in the history of Christianity. They were not roads to riches. See how wealth has corrupted them—see how the avaricious apprehensions for the treasure which the thief approaches, and the moth destroys, has wrapped them up in selfishness, hardened their hearts against the prayers of the people, and raised their voices against the patriotism of the throne. With divine presence have they been warned against riches, and now in their living they set forth the truth of their pernicious effects. Our pampered priests preach the lesson, and present the example of the evil. In the last number of the Edinburgh Review, it is remarked,

"Of all the indications of a worldly spirit, none is so distinctly and emphatically denoted in the Scripture as a love of riches. Of all the 'things of life' against which the Gospel warns mankind, on account of its dangerous and demoralizing influence, none is so conspicuous as wealth. This influence is described in every variety of expression that language can furnish. It is rebuked by every striking representation that inspired wisdom could suggest. We are not left to deduce it from the general spirit of scripture, nor to demonstrate it from the tenor of any particular passage. It is the theme of constant, undisguised, and intelligible reprobation. It is exposed in a multitude of parables, and illustrated by a series of similes, that defy the meanest apprehension to interpret, or the most crafty to pervert. We ask then, when do these passages deter from the pursuit and enjoyment of wealth? All appear to be actuated by the ardent, active, enterprising zeal in their respective pursuits. The manum of unrighteousness seems to inspire none of the serious either with terror or aversion. Where the ordinary channels for procuring wealth are closed against them, they show no disinclination to obtain it in other ways. It comes equally acceptable to them in the shape of a legacy, or of dower with a companion for life. The love of money, which is the root of all evil, (mark the terrific epithet) is treated by them with an unaccountable degree of lenity and indulgence, considering their repugnance to worldly amusements. Not a word escapes from them on the pernicious effects of wealth. Not a tract issues from their repositories to caution us against its pursuit. Not a homily is heard from the pulpits on the solemn obligations to war against it. What a lesson the unerring guide which, according to our author, 'teaches us to distinguish the characteristic attributes of the things that be, and the things that be not of the world, in the widest acceptance of the term,' has imparted to them in this particular matter, they best know themselves. But taking Scripture for our authority, we feel bound to declare that few things of the world possess a more detrimental influence over man than wealth.

"It is not against the mere possession of wealth that its warnings are directed. It is against its capacity to multiply our attractions to the world, and to win our affections from 'the things that are above'—its tendency to enhance our fondness for the vain, and trifling, and costly ornaments of life; to minister to our love for pomp and distinction; to nurture our taste of ease and indolence; and to encourage pride, and arrogance, and selfishness. But with all these consequences plainly portrayed in Scripture, and often verified by the experience of life, our spiritual pretenses exhibit not the slightest fear to encounter the hazard of them."

The circumstance that the first opposition of the Bishops to the Government is upon the first measure of government for the good of the people, is highly characteristic. It reminds us of a poetic imagination in the story of Sinbad (more than one passage of whose adventures is, by the by, illustrated in present circumstances). An iron man rows a ferry boat for all comers on this condition, that they speak no good word, and entertain no virtuous thought while they are with him, or he stops his services, and the bark instantly sinks. Sinbad, when all but on shore, breathes a good word, and the iron slave suddenly refuses obedience, and the boat sinks. This is surely like the last of our modern Apostles.

PRODIGIOUS MEMORY OF NAPOLEON. His astonishing memory made him master of all things, not only in their essence, but also in the most minute details. The consequence of this was extremely perplexing for men who were not perfectly acquainted with the subjects they were to demonstrate. It was his constant application to all sorts of things, and his excellent method of classing them in his mind, that enabled him to carry his success so far. It has frequently happened to me to be less sure than he was of the distances of places, and of a number of particulars in my department, which he knew well enough to correct. M. de Talleyrand told me, that, as he was travelling one day with him from Boulogne to Paris, a short time after the army had left the court for the banks of the Rhine, the Emperor met a detachment of soldiers going to join their corps, which they did not know where to find. Having inquired the number of their regiment, he immediately calculated the day of their departure, and the road they had taken, and said to them, you will find your battalion at such a place. The army was, at that time, two hundred thousand men strong. The admirable order in which he arranged his ideas, and his prodigious memory, made him not only beloved by his soldiers as respected by the officers of the army. Every one knew that he never forgot the name of a brave man, and that it was always sufficient to recall to his memory some brave action to ensure its recompense; and whenever he promised anything, he always kept his word.—[Mmoires de Lavalette.]

CRUELTY.—An account of a most villainous act of cruelty is published in the New-Haven (Connecticut) Palladium, abstracted from the testimony given on the trial of the Rev. Samuel Arnold, the pastor of a church in Ossipee, New-Hampshire. Mr. Arnold being without children, persuaded a widow lady of his church to give up one of her sons to him, that he might bring him up as his own. The little lad was about four years of age. After he had been with Mr. Arnold a short time, in one of his reading lessons he was unable to pronounce the word suffer, when he was told by that person he should be whipped until he did. Accordingly the child was taken into the cellar in the month of January last, one hand was tied to a post, and by the other he was drawn out, so that his feet did not touch the ground, and in this position six sticks were worn up upon him, that had been toughened by the fire. The boy was yet unable to pronounce the word, whereupon Arnold called upon his servant girl to pull upon the unbound arm of the child, while he continued the beating with his cartilage whip until he exhausted himself. The boy was then put to bed. The physician who saw him the next morning, testified the child was then in a state of insensibility, and from was upon his lips, that from his ankle to his neck no one place on his legs, back or sides could be found large enough for the doctor to lay his finger, without touching the cuts or scarring made by the whip or sticks; and where the blood was not upon the skin, the flesh was bruised to resemble a jelly. Notwithstanding all this, from some cause Arnold escaped the punishment of the law although he was not acquitted. By great attention the doctor succeeded in saving the child's life. The Palladium states that the doctor had been on file for some time in the New-Hampshire Patriot, and was now called out from understanding that Arnold was preaching in Southbury, in that state. FASHION AT THE CAPITAL. Several large and decided fashionable parties are making up in this city, to spend the months of January and February in Washington.—The milliners and dress makers are taking their intellects in devising new and elegant dresses, sufficient to astonish and dazzle the western and southern belles whom they expect to encounter on the banks of the Potomac. The young Stillees have also been engaged in similar pursuits for the equipment of the other sex.—The approaching season at Washington is expected to be one of the most gay, fashionable, and dashing that we have had in twenty years.—[N. Y. Courier.]

Commissioner of Crown Lands Office. York, 1st December 1831.

THE following summary of the Rules established by His Majesty's Government for regulating the disposal of Lands, is published for the information of persons desirous of settling in Upper Canada. Once in every year, or oftener, the Commissioner of Crown Lands will draw up his report of the Land which it may be expedient to offer for sale by Public Auction within the ensuing year, and the upset price per acre at which he would recommend it to be offered; the Land so offered having been previously surveyed and valued. The Land will be laid out in Lots of one hundred acres each, and plans prepared for public inspection; which plans may be inspected in the office of the Surveyor General, or in that of his Deputies. The Commissioner of Crown Lands will give public notice in the Upper Canada Gazette, and such Newspapers as may be circulating in the Province, of the time and place for the sale of Land in each District, and of the upset price at which the Lands are proposed to be offered. The Lots will be sold to the highest bidder, and if no offer be made at the upset price, the Land will be reserved for future sale in a similar manner of Auction. The purchase money will be required to be paid down at the time of sale, or by four instalments with interest; the first instalment at the time of the sale, and the second, third and fourth instalments at the interval of a year. Any further conditions respecting these sales, will be found in the printed advertisements giving notice of them. To indigent Settlers who may be unable to avail themselves of these opportunities of private sale, Lands will be assigned by private sale, in certain specified Townships, at an estimated value, and the first payment will be accepted at the end of three years, without interest, and the remainder of the purchase money to be paid in three equal instalments, interest to commence after three years from the purchase.

Free Grants are not made by any but U. E. Loyalists, or such persons who have served His Majesty in the Navy or Regular Army. Persons of either of these classes will forward their applications for Land, accompanied by official documents in support of their claims, as heretofore, to the Civil Secretary of the Lieutenant Governor, and will receive answers to them on applying to the Clerk of the Executive Council, and their Location Tickets from the Surveyor General.

POWELL'S BALSAM OF ANISEED.

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH, ASTHMAS, &c.

THIS invaluable Medicine has the extraordinary property of immediately relieving Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, difficulty of Breathing, and Huskiness in the Throat.—It operates by dissolving the congealed Phlegm, consequently causing a free expectoration. Those who are troubled with that unpleasant tickling in the Throat, which deprives them of rest night after night, by the incessant Cough which it provokes, will, by taking one dose, find immediate relief; and one bottle in most cases will effect a cure. Numerous cases have come to the Proprietor's knowledge, where young people have been troubled with Coughs, Spitting of Blood, and gradual Wasting away, with every appearance of going into a decline; who, by taking two or three bottles, have been entirely cured. In Asthma, Chronic Coughs, difficulty of Breathing, &c. no pen can describe the wonders that have been performed by this invaluable Medicine: many, who for years have been unable to lay down in their beds, have been cured by the accumulation of Phlegm, (which invariably causes a dreadful Cough) others, who with difficulty could breathe at all in a recumbent posture, have, by taking one dose of this excellent Balsam, been enabled to lay down comfortably in their beds. But the testimonials of those who have experienced its wonderful effects, will do more to recommend and ensure the support of the Public than any thing the Proprietor can say in its favour, and by particular request he has published the following extraordinary cases. Extract of a letter forwarded by James Fair, Esq. of Lustruther, Roxburghshire, to Mr. Renwick, of Jedburgh, who forwarded it to Mr. Powell.

Lustruther, 18th Jan. 1830. "Dear Sir, I know that I was sceptical with regard to the wonders performed by the administration of Patent Medicines to the numerous complaints of afflicted patients.—I have now altered my opinion, at least in so far as to the effect produced on me by two doses of 'Powell's Balsam of Aniseed.' In fact it was quite magical! Having been for some time afflicted and tormented with what is termed a 'Stomach Cough,' I took one tea-spoonful of the bottle sent me, mixed with a wine-glassful of cold water, in the morning, and the same in the evening on stepping into bed; although prevented from sleeping the whole of the previous night, I found myself entirely cured, not having even coughed from that time to this, a period of at least a week! Had one of the 'Serpent Chir' descended from Heaven and said 'be ye whole,' the effect produced could not have been more immediate or effectual. "You are at liberty to make what use you may think proper of this letter, for its contents are no less true than wonderful." Kingston, Upper Canada, } 28th June, 1831. } Mr. Wm. Hough, Montreal.

Sir—Having been for a very long time troubled with a severe cough, with difficulty of breathing (particularly when lying down) so much so, as at times almost to produce suffocation, and after trying several remedies in hopes of a cure but without effect, I was induced during my late visit to Montreal, to purchase a Bottle of Powell's Balsam of Aniseed, having heard of its extraordinary properties, and I beg to assure you that the effect it had upon me, after taking one or two doses, was an almost instantaneous cure. I am happy to observe that you have written a supply of this invaluable Medicine to Mr. H. Smith, of Kingston, and I have no doubt the demand for it will be as extensive in Upper Canada (in proportion to the population) as in any other part of the world where its virtues are known. You are at liberty to make any use of this letter you may think proper, and I hope it may prove one of the means of increasing the sale of the Balsam and thereby benefiting mankind. I am, Sir, your most obed't. Serv't. DUNCAN VANALSTINE

Upon the arrival of the expected supply, the subscriber intends to advertise advantages which his establishment will afford to the Upper Canada merchant, which the limited time afforded by the publication of the Chronicle to day precludes his doing now. S. O. MAHAHAN. Kingston, October 15th, 1831.
