The troops, hitherto faithful, are going over to the insurgents, who, in a few days, will be designated by another title, and government which, but six months since, had the support of almost every province and town in Spain, has fallen at once, as by a stroke of paralysis. Three telegraphic despatches from Bayonne were received in Paris on Saturday evening. The first announces that Cadiz had made its promunicumento, and that the authorities in Esparter's interest had left the city. The second announces that Espartero, abandoned by the major part of his troops, had taken refuge in the Portuguese territory, where he arrived on the 17th, with a squadron of cavalry. The third states it to be certain that the division of Iriarte has gone over to Aspiroz, as also the troops under Euna.

The revolution seems to have reached almost its last act. The capital, Madrid, had surrendered to the insurgents, while the Regent was hombarding Seville. The Duke of Baylen had been named provisional guardian of the Queen. The new Cortes were to assemble immediately. The Boston papers say that Espartero had taken refuge in Portugal, but we find no such intelligence in the London papers to the 3rd instant, evening; inclusive.—[N. Y. Com. Adv. ALGIERS.

From Wilmer's European Times, Aug. 4.
COMMERCIAL SUMMARY. Trade continues in the same quiescent state which has marked it for some time past. As compared with the feeling which existed twelve months ago, there is a decided improvement, but the impetus which the year opened jobled by the cessation of hostilities in China and the East the cessation of hostilities in China and the East Indies, has not been maintained. The stock of cotton on hand is enormous, and exceeds by upward of 300,000 bales the quantity which was held last year. The present stock is little if any short of a million of bales!—nearly a year's consumption. The Liverpool merchants, in this state of things, are impressing upon Government the necessity of having a drawback of the duty paid upon imported cotton, accompanied by a paid upon imported cotton, accompanied by a more liberal and comprehensive system for fa-cilitating export orders, with every prospect of Provisions, &c.—The following extract from a letter from a gentleman extensively engaged in the provision trade, will be acceptable to many of our readers:—

London, July 8, 1843.—I believe the consign ments of beef and pork from America have been upprofitable. Mess beef from New York was sold from 77s 6d to 84s per tierce of 304 lbs. There were too many shins and coarse deck pieces. India beef was sold at 107s 6d per tierce of three cwt, but must have cost more, as it consisted entirely of choice pieces of beef. Pork from the Southern States was sold at 44s, but the quality of all the pork is very indifferent. It boils away in the process of cooking. Irish mess beef was sold at 95s to 100s, and India tection to fugitive slaves.

On the 23th Lord John Russell made the usual opposition review of the Government measures finding all the fault, of course, that could be found. Sir Robert Peol replied. We quote from his speech what he said on the subject of Ireland;

With respect to Ireland, sir, I must also say that the course her Majesty's Government have taken with regard to that country has been the subject of discussion to a great extent and that very recently; & we are told that in the course of next week the state of Ireland is again to be brought under the consideration of this House. Why, sir, the ministers of the Crown have already explained to the House the course they have pursued and intend to pursue. They have explained that it is their determination to leave the offort untried for the maintenance of the local proposition of the sample of lard floating in the oil, and the oil was of a darkievent of the sample of lard floating in the oil, and the oil was of a darkievent of the sample of lard floating in the oil, and the oil was of a darkievent of the sample of lard floating in the oil, and the oil was of a darkievent of the sample of lard floating in the oil, and the oil was of a darkievent of the sample of lard floating in the oil, and the oil was of a darkievent of the sample of lard floating in the oil, and the oil was of a darkievent of the sample of lard floating in the oil, and the oil was of a darkievent of the sample of lard floating in the oil, and the oil was of a darkievent of the sample of lard floating in the oil, and the oil was of a darkievent of the sample of lard floating in the oil, and the oil was of a darkievent of the sample of lard floating in the oil, and the oil was of a darkievent of the sample of lard floating in the oil, and the oil was of a darkievent of the sample of lard floating in the oil at 10 the large of the sample of lard floating in the oil at 10 the large of the sample of lard floating in the oil at 10 the large of the sample of lard floating in the oil at 10 the
