We see from placards in Town, that a rail-road meeting is summoned to be held in Water-town next Friday, at which, without doubt, our neighbours will exert themselves to give the first start to the new rail-road by making liberal subscriptions to its stock. The following notice of Kingston and the rail-road we take from the correspondence of the New York Commercial Advertiser. The writer thinks that there is a lack of "public spirit" in Kingston. We think that he is mistaken, of which there is an lack of "public spirit" in Kingston. We think that he is mistaken, of which there is an lack of "public spirit" in Kingston. We think that he is mistaken, of which there is an lack of "public spirit" in Kingston. We think that he is mistaken, of which there is an lack of "public spirit exhibited in any place than were shown here on that occasion. In fact, Kingston owes its present exhausted state to the efforts that were then made in reliance on the good faith of the government. If the Town had done less then, it would have been better able to do more now. There is no lack of public spirit, but there We see from placards in Town, that a railthe government. If the Town had done less then, it would have been better able to do more now. There is no lack of public spirit, but there is a great lack of means, all available means having been sunk in public spirited enterprises that are now unproductive, owing to a breach of faith on the part of the Government.

"Since the removal of the seat of Govern "Since the removal of the seat of Government from Kingston, the population has fallen off considerably; but it is that portion which was transitory. The greatest injury it received was in consequence of its being placed in Kingston, and the promise by the Government that it should remain here. Capitalists and holders of real estate were thereby induced to build houses, stores, &c. for the accommodation of the increased population which the seat of Government naturally caused. The town too built a truly manifest. caused. The town too, built a truly magnificent edifice, not surpassed, or hardly equalled by any building in the United States for similiar purposes.
