We publish below the prospectus of a New System of Natural Philosophy, which professes to supersede much of the Newto-nian Philosophy, by assigning new and ad-equate causes for the phenomena of Nature. Whether the truth of the new system be demonstrated or not the discussion will demonstrated or not, the discussion will elicit some novel explanations of the great principles of nature. The following extract from Professor Playfair supposes that Mr. Eddy's theory may possibly be true.

[Editor Herald.]

"The discovery of this great principle— the principle of the identity of electricity, magnetism, gravitation, &c.—may be an honor reserved for a future age; and science may again have to record names which are to stand on the same levels with those of Newton and La Place. About such uttimate attainment' it were unwise to be sangoine, and unphilosophical to despair."
