We think it right that the principal cause of this prostration should be attributed to its correct source. The trial of the Lenox and Adminton contested election has been going on for several days. Yesterday the first count in the indictment, charging the Returning Officer with partiality, &c. was concluded. Although not excluding the conduct of the officer, the committee decided that the charges were not sufficient to nullify the election. The allegations against Mr. Cartwright for bribery, corruption, &c. will be inquired into immediately. Yesterday several important measures were brought before Parliament, among which the Naturalization Bill, and one to revise the Statutes of Lower Canada. The House will soon have subjects of importance to grapple with.
