A Word About Word Ah'me Pthese terrible tongues of ours!

Are we balf aware of their mighty powers?

Do we ever trouble our hears at all

Where the jest may strike or the hint may fall?

The late-tehirp of that "little bird."

That spicy story 'you'must have heard "—

We jerk them away in our gossip rash,

And somebody's glass, of course, goes smash.

What fames have been biasted and broken,

What postilential staks been stirred,

By a word in lightness spoken,

By only an idle word!

A sneer-a shrug-a whisper low-They are poisoned shatts from an ambushed Shot by the coward, the fool, the knave.
They pi-ree the mail of the great and brave.
Vain is the buckler of wisdom or pride
To turn the pitil as point aside;
The lip may curl with a careless smile,
But the heart drips blood—drips blood Ah me! what hearts have been broken What vivers of blood been stirred.

To paint the pic ure I wish you to see,

The brow of some calm, reflective Greek, An oval face and an olive cheek,

A chin like some famous old Van Dyke, And a mouth-now what is this young mouth Don't guess what! You don't know.

A ENOT OF BLUE. She hath no gems of lustre bright To sparkle in her hair. No need hath she of borrowed light To make her beauty fair Upon her shiping locks afloat Arc dalales wet with dew, And peeping from her lissome throat A little knot of blue.

A dainty knot of blue, A ribbon lithe of hue-It fills my dreams with sunny gleams That little knot of blue.

I met her down the shady lane Beneath the apple tree, The balmy blossoms fell like rain Upon my love and me : And what I said and what I did That morn I never knew. But to my breast there came and hid

THE OBSTACLE ALWAYS A There's always a river to cross. Always an effort to make. If there's anything good to win, Any rich prize to take Youder's the fruit we crave : Yonder the charming scene; But deep and wide, with a troubled tide, For, rougher the way that we take,

For ne'er from our impulse swerve. For the glory we hope to win Our labors we count no loss; Of the river we have to cross. Counting chickens ere they're batched

The stouter the heart and the nerve.

The stones in our path we break,

Hailooing still in the wood; Leaving secret doors unlatched Judging things untasted good. Crossing bridges ere you see them, Counting folly things untried; Fancy ilis and madly flee them

Calling pre eut uselessness Dwelling on the mummied past : Picturing unknown distress, Croaking, good can never last.

Judging sport with ain allied.

Too Many Blisters. At the Medical Association meeting last night Dr. Clark, of Walkerton, a little, elderly gentleman of remarkably forcible utterance, told a story which convulsed his audience and even brought the semblance of a smile to the face of the plaster bust of Lord Bacon, just over President Tye's bead. The subject under discussion was the treatment of pneumonia. Some one by blisters. One time, up my way, I was called in a burry to treat a lady for amine her chest. I took off what I found to be a plaster and got ready for the examination. But I found another bit cloth. I took it off and f and that I hadn't lough, but I sell you I am speaking the words of armsh and gross When I had taken off the third tie found there was still another. And wue you suppose the mistake arose? The doctor who bad been treating the lady before I was called in had told her maid to renew that blister once every hour !"- Toronto World.

Contly Flowers for Kating The eating of flowers is a nineteenth century reality. Crystallized violets at $6 a pound are the very latest things in confectionery. Candied rose leaves are also very popular. Girls like to eat flowers and will pay as high as $10 a pound for some of the more expensive kinds. They are all brought from France, but with the growth of favor for things American, we shall doubtless soon see a beginning of the flower-candying industry in this country and the girls will begin to munch orystal lized pumpkin blossoms and Johnny jump
