In the first assault Chief into the street, lifted up high and let fall until they broke and liberated their contents. All the furniture was carried out, piled in the centre of the roadway and burned to furnish the rioters with light during their debauch. Men, youth and girls drank until they fell helpless in the gusters, the girls acting with greater fury during the earlier stages of the orgie than the men. The noise, profunity and disorder were terrible. The mob ended their work here by firing the tavern itself, and it burned to the ground. Then the stronger men, who had become infuriated, and not overpowered by their potations, ran through the streets wrecking and pillaging wherever they went, and increasing their following the furtuer they proceeded. These rioters after a while congregated around the police station and stoned the place until they were tired. They then maraned down to another tavern. The police hastened thither in advance of them and attempted to protect the property, but they were overpowared and driven away. The mob left in possession treated the tavern as they had treated Duffy's, turned on all the tapr. bontire of the furniture, and finally set fire to the building. The police returned, and

One at a Time. One stop at a time, and that well placed. We reach the grandest height; One stroke at a time, earth's hidden stores Will slowly come to light One seed at a time, and the forest grows One drop at a time, and the river flows Into the boundless sea.

One word at a time, and the greatest book Is written and is read ; One stone at a time, and the palace reare aloft its stately head ; ne blow at a time, and the tree's cleft through, And a city will stand where the forest grew A few short years before.

One foe at a time, and he subdued, And the conflict will be won; One grain at a time, and the sand of life Will slowly all be run;

One grain of knowledge, and that well stored Another and more on them, And as time rolls on your mind will shine With many a garnered gem One thing at a time, and that done well," . . Is wisdom's proven rule.
