

A CORRECTION.

We stated in our initial number of the new series of the REPORTER that the "Independent" list for Leeds had been transferred to us. When we wrote that statement negotiations were in progress with that object in view. Since then we have failed to arrange the matter satisfactorily to all parties as there are quite a few of the old subscribers to the REPORTER who wish to continue to take the "Independent" also. It is therefore arranged that there will be no transfer of the list.

Parties can take either paper they wish, and those wishing to take both papers can have them one year for $1.25, in advance. As previously intimated, the old REPORTER subscribers who continued to take the "Independent" are to pay to us; and all those in arrears will please send in the same to us at once.

Grain-saver Syndicate Meeting.
A meeting of the Directors of the Addison Steam Thresher Syndicate was held at the residence of Rufus Taplin, Esq., on Saturday evening last, a large number of the shareholders being present. Richard Kerr, President, occupied the chair. The Sec. Treas., R. Taplin, presented a report showing the net earnings to be $528.03, and the expenditure $304, leaving a dividend of $18.40 per $100 share. The report was received as satisfactory. The election of officers and managers for the present season resulted as follows: Rich. Kerr, Pres.; O. P. Arnold, Sec. Treas.; John Lovrin, John C. Blanchard and John Bourne, Managers. The Managers were instructed to put the machine in first-class running order at once, and to engage the necessary help to run the machine during the season. Directors' Meeting.
The Directors of the Unionville Fair met at Forth's hotel on Friday last, for the appointment of judges on growing crops and other business. The following were present: Wm. Neilson, Pres.; N. H. Beecher, Vice-Pres.; B. Lovrin, Sec.; E. Davis, Treas.; L. M. Shipman, Rany Lockes, John Forth, John M. Keeler, John B. Barry, and Henry Lee, Directors. Sturgeon; 2nd class, George Lee and John Johnston; 3rd class, Jas. Dickey and Robt. Armstrong. On motion, Messrs. Beecher and Davis were appointed a committee on printing large posters. On motion, the Secretary was instructed to ask for sealed tenders from the different brass bands in this section, for their services during one and a half days of the fair. Bands tendering must state number of players and will have to defray all their own expenses excepting admission to the grounds. The Secretary reported the receipt of a number of special prizes. It was agreed that as soon as all the special prizes are arranged, they will appear in the REPORTER and in the Advance Courier. The REPORTER was adopted as the official organ of the society. All the business meetings of the Directors will be reported in this paper, and each of the Directors will be furnished with a copy for the year.

CURIOUS AND SENSATIONAL.

She Must have been Tongue-Tied.
A divorce case is soon to come up in a Maine court, the outgrowth of a trifling quarrel between a man and his wife twenty-five years ago. Since that day, although living together, neither has spoken to the other, until a few weeks ago, when in the excitement of house-cleaning the woman said to the man "Where's the nails?" The man looked at the woman calmly and did not answer.

Gabriel Wasn't Welcome.
Over twenty years ago there lived in Tipton, Ia., two boys, who could distance Peck's bad boy and give him four miles the start. At that time there was much talk of the end of the world and many timid people were in an agony of fear lest the last day would come in the night and catch them in their shortstop clothes, their hair out and their ascension robes in the wash. John and George, the two juvenile angels in question, concluded to add to the interest and see how much truth there was in the assertion of some of the overly pious that Gabriel couldn't spring troops on them too quick; so they procured an enormous crowd, scraped it out quite thin, and carved the most hideous face upon it that ever was sketched by a mortal hand. They put a candle in the hole, attached it to a kite, and when darkness enveloped that portion of the earth they betook themselves to a corn patch in the centre of the town, lit the candle and sent the infernal thing aloft. It looked like a drunken comet with the face of the devil. Stir up the town? In ten minutes there was music by the entire orchestra. Women fainted, children cried, and men prayed who had no idea they knew how. Such an awful banner as that in the sky could only mean that time was, but time would proceed to go into bankruptcy in the immediate future. Men confessed their sins and women their frailties, and there was enough scandal afloat in fifteen minutes to amuse London, if any one had time to attend to it. An old bald-headed deacon who had often prayed for it, and down through the trees his bald head went a-glimmering, as he sought safety from the wrath to come. He was pulled out of a hollow log next day a confessed thief of church moneys. When the awful uproar was at its height the kite string broke, and the boys went into the country a few days for their health.

A Vicksburg Story of Bravado.
"Talking about nerve," said one of the veterans, on his way to attend the Army of the Tennessee Reunion, "let me tell you a little army story. I was at Vicksburg. When the work there got down to pretty close range, the Johnnies showed us what kind of sharpshooters they had. They were clever fellows, those sharpshooters, and they would pick a man of us quick as a wink if he once showed his head up. They were always on the lookout for that kind of game, and even at night it was at safe for a man to get up on top of the earthworks. In our company was an Irishman, Tim McCarthy, and of all the dare-devils he was the worst I ever saw. He was passionately fond of smoking, and if anybody would give him a cigar at night he would light it, and climb up on the works and puff away. Of course the ashes would obscure the fire, but every once in a while he would knock the ashes off, leaving a bright light for the sharpshooters to aim at. At first I noticed that with all his dare-devilry there was something of method in his madness, for he would never climb up until the ashes had formed over the fire. Then when he knocked the ashes off he would hold the cigar at arm's length. Whenever he did this, crack, crack, crack, went the Johnnies, and we could hear the bullets whistling over our heads. But after a while he became so reckless that he would knock the ashes off his cigar while holding it in his mouth. Nobody ever saw such nerve as that man had, but not a bullet ever touched him, though several went through his hat and marked his clothing."

Modern Progress.

Let the studious mind look back one hundred years and see the improvements in the methods of work, and the rapid progress of the century in the mechanical arts will be apparent. In 1793 Eli Whitney, a mere lad in obscure circumstances, was led to the idea of inventing the cotton gin, a machine for picking the cotton from the seed. For some time he labored with but little success, but being of a determined turn of mind he eventually mastered it. The result, as we all know, was to make cotton king and to create a great source of wealth to the United States. Again, Fulton's application of steam to navigation, in 1807, deserves special mention as one of the greatest inventions of the age; and although the first steam boat went up the Hudson at the rapid rate of four miles an hour, yet in those days it was a good model, and had many points of excellence still clinging to by our modern ship builders. Morse's invention of the electric telegraph (1835), although improved upon from time to time, was certainly a mark of great progress. While the invention of paper, and the printing press, and the steam engine, and the steam locomotion, and the electric light, the telephone, the phonograph and the microphone can truly be termed the four new wonders of the world, there are many other inventions of our time, and these are the result of the progress of the century. But what are all these compared with the new Davis Vertical-feed Sewing Machine? This new machine entirely dispenses with the old under-feed, and consequently entirely obviates the necessity of basting. It has a less number of working parts, and is therefore the easiest running and most durable. It is fine in appearance, and of range of work, in light or heavy goods, we boldly defy competition. J. L. GALLAGHER, agent.
