

FARMERSVILLE AND VICINITY.

Our Reporter's Note Book Turned Inside Out for the Benefit of the Public.

WE REGRET to learn of the severe illness of Mr. Thos. Berney, who has been confined to the house for over a week, with acute rheumatism.

Mr. C. A. KINCAID, whose assignment was not a short time ago, has effected a settlement with his creditors, and has sold his stock in trade to Mr. J. Thompson.

NEARLY ALL the cheese factories in this section have commenced operations. The Plum Hollow factory was making during the past two weeks, and on Saturday morning last took in over 20,000 lbs. of milk.

MESSES. GORDON & SON received a new loom for their woollen mill on Monday. They found one loom totally inadequate to supply the demand last year, and have decided to take time by the forelock and have everything in readiness for this season's business.

QUITE A LARGE number of the bodies that were deposited in the vault during the winter are being removed this week. The body of Mrs. Chas. G. Algarie, will be taken from the vault at 2 p.m. on Saturday and deposited in the family plot in the cemetery.

THE DEMAND for carpenters this spring in Farmersville, is so great, that every man who can shove a plane or handle a saw is engaged as soon as he strikes town. Mr. Wm. Parisi informs us that he has over a dozen contracts, including the Parish block and other large buildings.

THE ODDFELLOWS of Farmersville, have made arrangements to have the anniversary sermon preached this year, at Christ's church, in this village. The Rev. Dyson Hague, rector of St. Paul's church, Brockville, will deliver the sermon. The time is fixed for the second Sunday in May. Fuller particulars will appear in a future issue.

THE EYELEN in which the REPORTER is held as an advertising medium may be seen by a glance at our business columns, which are bristling with advertisements of the reliable business houses of Farmersville, Brockville, Delta and the County of Leeds generally. In spite of the fact that we have largely increased our rates for contract advertising the demands for space are more than we can well accommodate.

With economy and neatness, with hair unkempt, unpollished shoe, with slouching gait and nervous quiver, his necktie fastened round his ear, he shuffles stulkily along and looks as if he had something wrong. Wouldst know what means that battered hat, that rusty ragged old cravat, that shuffling gait, that tangled hair, that swollen aspect of despair? Approach and whisper in his ear: "William, what is to pay my dear?" And hear old Willie grumbling say: "My wife is cleaning house to-day."

Mr. Isaac Robeson has sold the home farm, on which he has resided for over forty years, to Wm. Shook and J. P. Wiltsie, for $8,000, and has purchased the fine new residence put up last season by A. E. Wiltsie, on the corner of Henry and Wiltsie streets, the consideration being $1,000. Mr. Robeson has let the contract for the erection of a residence and carriage house on one of his lots a few rods back of the North Church. He intends to occupy this house when it is finished, and to rent the place where he now lives. The universal query is: which way is Isaac looking for a home-keeper to grace the new premises?

FRESH, SPICY AND RELIABLE advertisements from a most interesting portion of every local newspaper. Our readers will always find in the advertising columns of the REPORTER announcements which will interest them and from which they may often gain information of value. A very safe general rule, and one which patrons will do well to follow, is to deal liberally with those who advertise. It is the duty of the journalist to refuse to publish the advertisements of those who are not strictly reliable and honorable in their business or profession. For our own part, we shall use every precaution to have none but reputable firms represented in our columns, and hence the reader may confidently patronize our advertisers, and may rest assured that in doing so he will get fair and honest dealing. While, as we have before remarked, the newspaper man is morally bound to exclude unreliable advertisements from his publication, we think the public should assist the conscientious journalist by mentioning to those with whom they deal the fact that they noticed their advertisements in the local paper. A little reasoning will show the justice of this plan, and we hope our readers will kindly do us the favor asked. It will cost them nothing, and will be of great service to us.

ONE OF THE worst ructions, which has occurred in this village since the coming in force of the Scott Act, occurred on Monday. It is reported that a whiskey pedler struck town very early in the morning, and no doubt knowing where he would find customers, he went in front of the Hotel de Demijohn, on Church street. He said that some five gallons of whiskey was deposited to a number of natives, who, having been discharged from the railway works, were the guests of the head butler of the establishment, who has assumed the role of commander since the departure of the chief of the brigade. The potent influence of the beverage was paint it red, and remind the citizens that the annual weekly strike was at hand. The programme opened with a gathering of the forces in rear of the Clerk of the Court's office, when an additional supply of "bug juice" was taken and a roll in the sand indulged in. The next act in the comedy was a can-can by one of the company, who placing a bottle of "blue ruin" in the middle of the principal street, indulged in a Sioux war dance, threw his hat in the air, and struck several very grotesque attitudes. At this stage "Rocky" whispered a few tall-tale sentences in the ear of the performer, which caused him to subside and give place to others. But constable Smith arrived, and, fearing that the performer might contract "mud fever," proceeded to place him behind the bars of the "pie house." At this stage the G. W. P. of the police force appeared on the scene, and demanded the keys of the Hotel de Demijohn from the head butler, who at once assumed the defensive, and grabbing the staff of office proceeded to flourish it a la Donnybrook fair over the chief's head. The G. W. P., with bombastic authority, ordered Lanky Fred, from the flats to assist him in conveying the belligerent butler to the cooler, which was accordingly done. After ruminating a few hours on the vicissitudes of life, the prisoner concluded to surrender the keys of "the mansion," on the chief's promise that he should be set free. The day ended with a grand finale at the Hotel de Demijohn, when the police and a large crowd of citizens raided the mansion, where they found the remains of the winter's banqueting. These consisted of broken glass-ware, one disabled fancy calling card receptacle, the remnants of what was once a Waterbury clock, whose tick, like that of the participants in the recent jorum, was played out, a nickel-plated corkscrew, blankets, old boots, old hats and a broken stove minus the lids, from which the smoke was gently ascending, like zeppyls, to the upper story of the now deserted mansion. In the woodshed was found a sorry backsaw (which no doubt had been borrowed from some kind neighbor), three forlorn looking hens (minus rooster), one string of withered dried apples, a few jugs and a cart load of empty bottles. After taking a careful inventory, as above, the G. W. P. proceeded to clear the building of the crowd, and, with the assistance of Detective Smith and Henry C. Cobb Hawkins, securely fastened the doors and windows, when all dispersed.

The Militia Department has decided that battalions turning out on Jubilee day must do so entirely at their own expense.

The Lower House of the Michigan Legislature has rejected woman suffrage, and the Pennsylvania Senate has declared in favor of it.

The remains of a man who died in the northern part of Michigan passed through Grand Rapids the other day and the physician's certificate attached to the coffin said that death was caused "mostly by old age," and that it was not contagious.

With economy and neatness, with hair unkempt, unpollished shoe, with slouching gait and nervous quiver, his necktie fastened round his ear, he shuffles stulkily along and looks as if he had something wrong. Wouldst know what means that battered hat, that rusty ragged old cravat, that shuffling gait, that tangled hair, that swollen aspect of despair? Approach and whisper in his ear: "William, what is to pay my dear?" And hear old Willie grumbling say: "My wife is cleaning house to-day."

point it red, and remind the citizens that the annual weekly strike was at hand. The programme opened with a gathering of the forces in rear of the Clerk of the Court's office, when an additional supply of "bug juice" was taken and a roll in the sand indulged in. The next act in the comedy was a can-can by one of the company, who placing a bottle of "blue ruin" in the middle of the principal street, indulged in a Sioux war dance, threw his hat in the air, and struck several very grotesque attitudes. At this stage "Rocky" whispered a few tall-tale sentences in the ear of the performer, which caused him to subside and give place to others. But constable Smith arrived, and, fearing that the performer might contract "mud fever," proceeded to place him behind the bars of the "pie house." At this stage the G. W. P. of the police force appeared on the scene, and demanded the keys of the Hotel de Demijohn from the head butler, who at once assumed the defensive, and grabbing the staff of office proceeded to flourish it a la Donnybrook fair over the chief's head. The G. W. P., with bombastic authority, ordered Lanky Fred, from the flats to assist him in conveying the belligerent butler to the cooler, which was accordingly done. After ruminating a few hours on the vicissitudes of life, the prisoner concluded to surrender the keys of "the mansion," on the chief's promise that he should be set free. The day ended with a grand finale at the Hotel de Demijohn, when the police and a large crowd of citizens raided the mansion, where they found the remains of the winter's banqueting. These consisted of broken glass-ware, one disabled fancy calling card receptacle, the remnants of what was once a Waterbury clock, whose tick, like that of the participants in the recent jorum, was played out, a nickel-plated corkscrew, blankets, old boots, old hats and a broken stove minus the lids, from which the smoke was gently ascending, like zeppyls, to the upper story of the now deserted mansion. In the woodshed was found a sorry backsaw (which no doubt had been borrowed from some kind neighbor), three forlorn looking hens (minus rooster), one string of withered dried apples, a few jugs and a cart load of empty bottles. After taking a careful inventory, as above, the G. W. P. proceeded to clear the building of the crowd, and, with the assistance of Detective Smith and Henry C. Cobb Hawkins, securely fastened the doors and windows, when all dispersed.

The Militia Department has decided that battalions turning out on Jubilee day must do so entirely at their own expense.

The Lower House of the Michigan Legislature has rejected woman suffrage, and the Pennsylvania Senate has declared in favor of it.

The remains of a man who died in the northern part of Michigan passed through Grand Rapids the other day and the physician's certificate attached to the coffin said that death was caused "mostly by old age," and that it was not contagious.

With economy and neatness, with hair unkempt, unpollished shoe, with slouching gait and nervous quiver, his necktie fastened round his ear, he shuffles stulkily along and looks as if he had something wrong. Wouldst know what means that battered hat, that rusty ragged old cravat, that shuffling gait, that tangled hair, that swollen aspect of despair? Approach and whisper in his ear: "William, what is to pay my dear?" And hear old Willie grumbling say: "My wife is cleaning house to-day."

Mr. Isaac Robeson has sold the home farm, on which he has resided for over forty years, to Wm. Shook and J. P. Wiltsie, for $8,000, and has purchased the fine new residence put up last season by A. E. Wiltsie, on the corner of Henry and Wiltsie streets, the consideration being $1,000. Mr. Robeson has let the contract for the erection of a residence and carriage house on one of his lots a few rods back of the North Church. He intends to occupy this house when it is finished, and to rent the place where he now lives. The universal query is: which way is Isaac looking for a home-keeper to grace the new premises?

FRESH, SPICY AND RELIABLE advertisements from a most interesting portion of every local newspaper. Our readers will always find in the advertising columns of the REPORTER announcements which will interest them and from which they may often gain information of value. A very safe general rule, and one which patrons will do well to follow, is to deal liberally with those who advertise. It is the duty of the journalist to refuse to publish the advertisements of those who are not strictly reliable and honorable in their business or profession. For our own part, we shall use every precaution to have none but reputable firms represented in our columns, and hence the reader may confidently patronize our advertisers, and may rest assured that in doing so he will get fair and honest dealing. While, as we have before remarked, the newspaper man is morally bound to exclude unreliable advertisements from his publication, we think the public should assist the conscientious journalist by mentioning to those with whom they deal the fact that they noticed their advertisements in the local paper. A little reasoning will show the justice of this plan, and we hope our readers will kindly do us the favor asked. It will cost them nothing, and will be of great service to us.

ONE OF THE worst ructions, which has occurred in this village since the coming in force of the Scott Act, occurred on Monday. It is reported that a whiskey pedler struck town very early in the morning, and no doubt knowing where he would find customers, he went in front of the Hotel de Demijohn, on Church street. He said that some five gallons of whiskey was deposited to a number of natives, who, having been discharged from the railway works, were the guests of the head butler of the establishment, who has assumed the role of commander since the departure of the chief of the brigade. The potent influence of the beverage was paint it red, and remind the citizens that the annual weekly strike was at hand. The programme opened with a gathering of the forces in rear of the Clerk of the Court's office, when an additional supply of "bug juice" was taken and a roll in the sand indulged in. The next act in the comedy was a can-can by one of the company, who placing a bottle of "blue ruin" in the middle of the principal street, indulged in a Sioux war dance, threw his hat in the air, and struck several very grotesque attitudes. At this stage "Rocky" whispered a few tall-tale sentences in the ear of the performer, which caused him to subside and give place to others. But constable Smith arrived, and, fearing that the performer might contract "mud fever," proceeded to place him behind the bars of the "pie house." At this stage the G. W. P. of the police force appeared on the scene, and demanded the keys of the Hotel de Demijohn from the head butler, who at once assumed the defensive, and grabbing the staff of office proceeded to flourish it a la Donnybrook fair over the chief's head. The G. W. P., with bombastic authority, ordered Lanky Fred, from the flats to assist him in conveying the belligerent butler to the cooler, which was accordingly done. After ruminating a few hours on the vicissitudes of life, the prisoner concluded to surrender the keys of "the mansion," on the chief's promise that he should be set free. The day ended with a grand finale at the Hotel de Demijohn, when the police and a large crowd of citizens raided the mansion, where they found the remains of the winter's banqueting. These consisted of broken glass-ware, one disabled fancy calling card receptacle, the remnants of what was once a Waterbury clock, whose tick, like that of the participants in the recent jorum, was played out, a nickel-plated corkscrew, blankets, old boots, old hats and a broken stove minus the lids, from which the smoke was gently ascending, like zeppyls, to the upper story of the now deserted mansion. In the woodshed was found a sorry backsaw (which no doubt had been borrowed from some kind neighbor), three forlorn looking hens (minus rooster), one string of withered dried apples, a few jugs and a cart load of empty bottles. After taking a careful inventory, as above, the G. W. P. proceeded to clear the building of the crowd, and, with the assistance of Detective Smith and Henry C. Cobb Hawkins, securely fastened the doors and windows, when all dispersed.

The Militia Department has decided that battalions turning out on Jubilee day must do so entirely at their own expense.

The Lower House of the Michigan Legislature has rejected woman suffrage, and the Pennsylvania Senate has declared in favor of it.

The remains of a man who died in the northern part of Michigan passed through Grand Rapids the other day and the physician's certificate attached to the coffin said that death was caused "mostly by old age," and that it was not contagious.

With economy and neatness, with hair unkempt, unpollished shoe, with slouching gait and nervous quiver, his necktie fastened round his ear, he shuffles stulkily along and looks as if he had something wrong. Wouldst know what means that battered hat, that rusty ragged old cravat, that shuffling gait, that tangled hair, that swollen aspect of despair? Approach and whisper in his ear: "William, what is to pay my dear?" And hear old Willie grumbling say: "My wife is cleaning house to-day."

Mr. Isaac Robeson has sold the home farm, on which he has resided for over forty years, to Wm. Shook and J. P. Wiltsie, for $8,000, and has purchased the fine new residence put up last season by A. E. Wiltsie, on the corner of Henry and Wiltsie streets, the consideration being $1,000. Mr. Robeson has let the contract for the erection of a residence and carriage house on one of his lots a few rods back of the North Church. He intends to occupy this house when it is finished, and to rent the place where he now lives. The universal query is: which way is Isaac looking for a home-keeper to grace the new premises?

FRESH, SPICY AND RELIABLE advertisements from a most interesting portion of every local newspaper. Our readers will always find in the advertising columns of the REPORTER announcements which will interest them and from which they may often gain information of value. A very safe general rule, and one which patrons will do well to follow, is to deal liberally with those who advertise. It is the duty of the journalist to refuse to publish the advertisements of those who are not strictly reliable and honorable in their business or profession. For our own part, we shall use every precaution to have none but reputable firms represented in our columns, and hence the reader may confidently patronize our advertisers, and may rest assured that in doing so he will get fair and honest dealing. While, as we have before remarked, the newspaper man is morally bound to exclude unreliable advertisements from his publication, we think the public should assist the conscientious journalist by mentioning to those with whom they deal the fact that they noticed their advertisements in the local paper. A little reasoning will show the justice of this plan, and we hope our readers will kindly do us the favor asked. It will cost them nothing, and will be of great service to us.

ONE OF THE worst ructions, which has occurred in this village since the coming in force of the Scott Act, occurred on Monday. It is reported that a whiskey pedler struck town very early in the morning, and no doubt knowing where he would find customers, he went in front of the Hotel de Demijohn, on Church street. He said that some five gallons of whiskey was deposited to a number of natives, who, having been discharged from the railway works, were the guests of the head butler of the establishment, who has assumed the role of commander since the departure of the chief of the brigade. The potent influence of the beverage was paint it red, and remind the citizens that the annual weekly strike was at hand. The programme opened with a gathering of the forces in rear of the Clerk of the Court's office, when an additional supply of "bug juice" was taken and a roll in the sand indulged in. The next act in the comedy was a can-can by one of the company, who placing a bottle of "blue ruin" in the middle of the principal street, indulged in a Sioux war dance, threw his hat in the air, and struck several very grotesque attitudes. At this stage "Rocky" whispered a few tall-tale sentences in the ear of the performer, which caused him to subside and give place to others. But constable Smith arrived, and, fearing that the performer might contract "mud fever," proceeded to place him behind the bars of the "pie house." At this stage the G. W. P. of the police force appeared on the scene, and demanded the keys of the Hotel de Demijohn from the head butler, who at once assumed the defensive, and grabbing the staff of office proceeded to flourish it a la Donnybrook fair over the chief's head. The G. W. P., with bombastic authority, ordered Lanky Fred, from the flats to assist him in conveying the belligerent butler to the cooler, which was accordingly done. After ruminating a few hours on the vicissitudes of life, the prisoner concluded to surrender the keys of "the mansion," on the chief's promise that he should be set free. The day ended with a grand finale at the Hotel de Demijohn, when the police and a large crowd of citizens raided the mansion, where they found the remains of the winter's banqueting. These consisted of broken glass-ware, one disabled fancy calling card receptacle, the remnants of what was once a Waterbury clock, whose tick, like that of the participants in the recent jorum, was played out, a nickel-plated corkscrew, blankets, old boots, old hats and a broken stove minus the lids, from which the smoke was gently ascending, like zeppyls, to the upper story of the now deserted mansion. In the woodshed was found a sorry backsaw (which no doubt had been borrowed from some kind neighbor), three forlorn looking hens (minus rooster), one string of withered dried apples, a few jugs and a cart load of empty bottles. After taking a careful inventory, as above, the G. W. P. proceeded to clear the building of the crowd, and, with the assistance of Detective Smith and Henry C. Cobb Hawkins, securely fastened the doors and windows, when all dispersed.

The Militia Department has decided that battalions turning out on Jubilee day must do so entirely at their own expense.

The Lower House of the Michigan Legislature has rejected woman suffrage, and the Pennsylvania Senate has declared in favor of it.

The remains of a man who died in the northern part of Michigan passed through Grand Rapids the other day and the physician's certificate attached to the coffin said that death was caused "mostly by old age," and that it was not contagious.

With economy and neatness, with hair unkempt, unpollished shoe, with slouching gait and nervous quiver, his necktie fastened round his ear, he shuffles stulkily along and looks as if he had something wrong. Wouldst know what means that battered hat, that rusty ragged old cravat, that shuffling gait, that tangled hair, that swollen aspect of despair? Approach and whisper in his ear: "William, what is to pay my dear?" And hear old Willie grumbling say: "My wife is cleaning house to-day."

Mr. Isaac Robeson has sold the home farm, on which he has resided for over forty years, to Wm. Shook and J. P. Wiltsie, for $8,000, and has purchased the fine new residence put up last season by A. E. Wiltsie, on the corner of Henry and Wiltsie streets, the consideration being $1,000. Mr. Robeson has let the contract for the erection of a residence and carriage house on one of his lots a few rods back of the North Church. He intends to occupy this house when it is finished, and to rent the place where he now lives. The universal query is: which way is Isaac looking for a home-keeper to grace the new premises?

FRESH, SPICY AND RELIABLE advertisements from a most interesting portion of every local newspaper. Our readers will always find in the advertising columns of the REPORTER announcements which will interest them and from which they may often gain information of value. A very safe general rule, and one which patrons will do well to follow, is to deal liberally with those who advertise. It is the duty of the journalist to refuse to publish the advertisements of those who are not strictly reliable and honorable in their business or profession. For our own part, we shall use every precaution to have none but reputable firms represented in our columns, and hence the reader may confidently patronize our advertisers, and may rest assured that in doing so he will get fair and honest dealing. While, as we have before remarked, the newspaper man is morally bound to exclude unreliable advertisements from his publication, we think the public should assist the conscientious journalist by mentioning to those with whom they deal the fact that they noticed their advertisements in the local paper. A little reasoning will show the justice of this plan, and we hope our readers will kindly do us the favor asked. It will cost them nothing, and will be of great service to us.

ONE OF THE worst ructions, which has occurred in this village since the coming in force of the Scott Act, occurred on Monday. It is reported that a whiskey pedler struck town very early in the morning, and no doubt knowing where he would find customers, he went in front of the Hotel de Demijohn, on Church street. He said that some five gallons of whiskey was deposited to a number of natives, who, having been discharged from the railway works, were the guests of the head butler of the establishment, who has assumed the role of commander since the departure of the chief of the brigade. The potent influence of the beverage was paint it red, and remind the citizens that the annual weekly strike was at hand. The programme opened with a gathering of the forces in rear of the Clerk of the Court's office, when an additional supply of "bug juice" was taken and a roll in the sand indulged in. The next act in the comedy was a can-can by one of the company, who placing a bottle of "blue ruin" in the middle of the principal street, indulged in a Sioux war dance, threw his hat in the air, and struck several very grotesque attitudes. At this stage "Rocky" whispered a few tall-tale sentences in the ear of the performer, which caused him to subside and give place to others. But constable Smith arrived, and, fearing that the performer might contract "mud fever," proceeded to place him behind the bars of the "pie house." At this stage the G. W. P. of the police force appeared on the scene, and demanded the keys of the Hotel de Demijohn from the head butler, who at once assumed the defensive, and grabbing the staff of office proceeded to flourish it a la Donnybrook fair over the chief's head. The G. W. P., with bombastic authority, ordered Lanky Fred, from the flats to assist him in conveying the belligerent butler to the cooler, which was accordingly done. After ruminating a few hours on the vicissitudes of life, the prisoner concluded to surrender the keys of "the mansion," on the chief's promise that he should be set free. The day ended with a grand finale at the Hotel de Demijohn, when the police and a large crowd of citizens raided the mansion, where they found the remains of the winter's banqueting. These consisted of broken glass-ware, one disabled fancy calling card receptacle, the remnants of what was once a Waterbury clock, whose tick, like that of the participants in the recent jorum, was played out, a nickel-plated corkscrew, blankets, old boots, old hats and a broken stove minus the lids, from which the smoke was gently ascending, like zeppyls, to the upper story of the now deserted mansion. In the woodshed was found a sorry backsaw (which no doubt had been borrowed from some kind neighbor), three forlorn looking hens (minus rooster), one string of withered dried apples, a few jugs and a cart load of empty bottles. After taking a careful inventory, as above, the G. W. P. proceeded to clear the building of the crowd, and, with the assistance of Detective Smith and Henry C. Cobb Hawkins, securely fastened the doors and windows, when all dispersed.

The Militia Department has decided that battalions turning out on Jubilee day must do so entirely at their own expense.

The Lower House of the Michigan Legislature has rejected woman suffrage, and the Pennsylvania Senate has declared in favor of it.

The remains of a man who died in the northern part of Michigan passed through Grand Rapids the other day and the physician's certificate attached to the coffin said that death was caused "mostly by old age," and that it was not contagious.

With economy and neatness, with hair unkempt, unpollished shoe, with slouching gait and nervous quiver, his necktie fastened round his ear, he shuffles stulkily along and looks as if he had something wrong. Wouldst know what means that battered hat, that rusty ragged old cravat, that shuffling gait, that tangled hair, that swollen aspect of despair? Approach and whisper in his ear: "William, what is to pay my dear?" And hear old Willie grumbling say: "My wife is cleaning house to-day."

Mr. Isaac Robeson has sold the home farm, on which he has resided for over forty years, to Wm. Shook and J. P. Wiltsie, for $8,000, and has purchased the fine new residence put up last season by A. E. Wiltsie, on the corner of Henry and Wiltsie streets, the consideration being $1,000. Mr. Robeson has let the contract for the erection of a residence and carriage house on one of his lots a few rods back of the North Church. He intends to occupy this house when it is finished, and to rent the place where he now lives. The universal query is: which way is Isaac looking for a home-keeper to grace the new premises?

FRESH, SPICY AND RELIABLE advertisements from a most interesting portion of every local newspaper. Our readers will always find in the advertising columns of the REPORTER announcements which will interest them and from which they may often gain information of value. A very safe general rule, and one which patrons will do well to follow, is to deal liberally with those who advertise. It is the duty of the journalist to refuse to publish the advertisements of those who are not strictly reliable and honorable in their business or profession. For our own part, we shall use every precaution to have none but reputable firms represented in our columns, and hence the reader may confidently patronize our advertisers, and may rest assured that in doing so he will get fair and honest dealing. While, as we have before remarked, the newspaper man is morally bound to exclude unreliable advertisements from his publication, we think the public should assist the conscientious journalist by mentioning to those with whom they deal the fact that they noticed their advertisements in the local paper. A little reasoning will show the justice of this plan, and we hope our readers will kindly do us the favor asked. It will cost them nothing, and will be of great service to us.

ONE OF THE worst ructions, which has occurred in this village since the coming in force of the Scott Act, occurred on Monday. It is reported that a whiskey pedler struck town very early in the morning, and no doubt knowing where he would find customers, he went in front of the Hotel de Demijohn, on Church street. He said that some five gallons of whiskey was deposited to a number of natives, who, having been discharged from the railway works, were the guests of the head butler of the establishment, who has assumed the role of commander since the departure of the chief of the brigade. The potent influence of the beverage was paint it red, and remind the citizens that the annual weekly strike was at hand. The programme opened with a gathering of the forces in rear of the Clerk of the Court's office, when an additional supply of "bug juice" was taken and a roll in the sand indulged in. The next act in the comedy was a can-can by one of the company, who placing a bottle of "blue ruin" in the middle of the principal street, indulged in a Sioux war dance, threw his hat in the air, and struck several very grotesque attitudes. At this stage "Rocky" whispered a few tall-tale sentences in the ear of the performer, which caused him to subside and give place to others. But constable Smith arrived, and, fearing that the performer might contract "mud fever," proceeded to place him behind the bars of the "pie house." At this stage the G. W. P. of the police force appeared on the scene, and demanded the keys of the Hotel de Demijohn from the head butler, who at once assumed the defensive, and grabbing the staff of office proceeded to flourish it a la Donnybrook fair over the chief's head. The G. W. P., with bombastic authority, ordered Lanky Fred, from the flats to assist him in conveying the belligerent butler to the cooler, which was accordingly done. After ruminating a few hours on the vicissitudes of life, the prisoner concluded to surrender the keys of "the mansion," on the chief's promise that he should be set free. The day ended with a grand finale at the Hotel de Demijohn, when the police and a large crowd of citizens raided the mansion, where they found the remains of the winter's banqueting. These consisted of broken glass-ware, one disabled fancy calling card receptacle, the remnants of what was once a Waterbury clock, whose tick, like that of the participants in the recent jorum, was played out, a nickel-plated corkscrew, blankets, old boots, old hats and a broken stove minus the lids, from which the smoke was gently ascending, like zeppyls, to the upper story of the now deserted mansion. In the woodshed was found a sorry backsaw (which no doubt had been borrowed from some kind neighbor), three forlorn looking hens (minus rooster), one string of withered dried apples, a few jugs and a cart load of empty bottles. After taking a careful inventory, as above, the G. W. P. proceeded to clear the building of the crowd, and, with the assistance of Detective Smith and Henry C. Cobb Hawkins, securely fastened the doors and windows, when all dispersed.

The Militia Department has decided that battalions turning out on Jubilee day must do so entirely at their own expense.

The Lower House of the Michigan Legislature has rejected woman suffrage, and the Pennsylvania Senate has declared in favor of it.

The remains of a man who died in the northern part of Michigan passed through Grand Rapids the other day and the physician's certificate attached to the coffin said that death was caused "mostly by old age," and that it was not contagious.

With economy and neatness, with hair unkempt, unpollished shoe, with slouching gait and nervous quiver, his necktie fastened round his ear, he shuffles stulkily along and looks as if he had something wrong. Wouldst know what means that battered hat, that rusty ragged old cravat, that shuffling gait, that tangled hair, that swollen aspect of despair? Approach and whisper in his ear: "William, what is to pay my dear?" And hear old Willie grumbling say: "My wife is cleaning house to-day."

Mr. Isaac Robeson has sold the home farm, on which he has resided for over forty years, to Wm. Shook and J. P. Wiltsie, for $8,000, and has purchased the fine new residence put up last season by A. E. Wiltsie, on the corner of Henry and Wiltsie streets, the consideration being $1,000. Mr. Robeson has let the contract for the erection of a residence and carriage house on one of his lots a few rods back of the North Church. He intends to occupy this house when it is finished, and to rent the place where he now lives. The universal query is: which way is Isaac looking for a home-keeper to grace the new premises?

FRESH, SPICY AND RELIABLE advertisements from a most interesting portion of every local newspaper. Our readers will always find in the advertising columns of the REPORTER announcements which will interest them and from which they may often gain information of value. A very safe general rule, and one which patrons will do well to follow, is to deal liberally with those who advertise. It is the duty of the journalist to refuse to publish the advertisements of those who are not strictly reliable and honorable in their business or profession. For our own part, we shall use every precaution to have none but reputable firms represented in our columns, and hence the reader may confidently patronize our advertisers, and may rest assured that in doing so he will get fair and honest dealing. While, as we have before remarked, the newspaper man is morally bound to exclude unreliable advertisements from his publication, we think the public should assist the conscientious journalist by mentioning to those with whom they deal the fact that they noticed their advertisements in the local paper. A little reasoning will show the justice of this plan, and we hope our readers will kindly do us the favor asked. It will cost them nothing, and will be of great service to us.

Gananoque will build an addition to its public school, at a cost of $3,000. Mrs. Peter McLaren, Perth, has presented St. James' church in that town with a handsome pulpit that cost over $300.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES & DEATHS.

Notices under this head inserted free of cost.

BIRTHS. DUNNAN.—On the 16th inst., the wife of A. F. Donnyan, of a son.

BROWN.—On the 17th inst., the wife of Lester Brown, of a son.

ROBESON'S SALVE, A GENUINE preparation for SCRATCHES, CALKS, SORE SHOULDERS, &c., &c., &c.

PRICE 50c. PER BOX.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

We, the undersigned, have used Robeson's Salve for scratches and calks, and it has given us great satisfaction.

(Signed) Francis Wiltsie, Philip P. Slack, S. A. Taplin, Thos. Vanarium, F. Pierce, Wm. Mott, Delorma Wiltsie, Rev. R. N. Jones.

ROBESON'S LIQUID OINTMENT, FOR SURE CURE OF SPAVIN, RINGBONE & CURB.

Is a genuine remedy for the above, if applied according to directions.

Price $1.00 per bottle.

Prepared by Isaac Robeson, Farmersville.

Stock Complete. H. H. ARNOLD

IS NOW SHOWING a most Complete Stock of NEW SPRING GOODS, carefully selected, and at prices to suit the closest buyers. To SEE our DRESS GOODS is to ADMIRE them; to learn their price is to wonder at their value. The same can be said of our Dress Goggles (over 50 patterns at 10c.) Also our Pants, Shirts, Cottonades, Grey and White Colours, are pronounced by the people to be the BEST VALUE shown in Farmersville this season. Our Canadian, Scotch and English Tweeds and Suitings are SECOND TO NONE in appearance or value, and to see them before buying they mean to you money saved. An inspection will prove our assertion. Men's Spring Hats in great variety just arrived.

SEE OUR HOME-MADE COLLARS. A large stock to select from.

Nearly 20 sets of harness now on hand. A full line of whips, brushes, curry combs, etc.

A. E. WILTSE.

FARMERSVILLE SHAVING PARLOR.

Gamble House.

WHILE thinking my patrons for past favors, I beg to assure them that the report that I am about leaving Farmersville is entirely untrue. I shall always be found at the Gamble House Shaving Parlor, ready to give courteous and skilful attention to my friends, who are too numerous for me to even think of anything else but staying right here.

No shaving on Sunday.

E. CARSON.

CHINA HALL, BROCKVILLE.

GREATEST VARIETY OF CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE & FANCY GOODS.

In Central Canada. 20 PER CENT. DISCOUNT.

Just now we are giving Great BARGAINS in China and Printed Tea Sets, Enamelled and Printed Dinner and Breakfast Sets, and Enamelled and Printed Chamber Sets.

When in Brockville call and see the above lines of goods. They are cheap.

CHINA HALL. F. W. WEST.

EAGLE WRINGER.

Best in the World!

ANTI-FRICTION GEARING, REQUIRING NO OIL.

SOLID WHITE RUBBER ROLLERS, VULCANIZED TO SHAFTS.

CONSTRUCTED ENTIRELY OF MALLEABLE IRON, ORGANIZED IN THE BEST POSSIBLE MANNER.

CONNOR'S IMPROVED WASHER!

Best Washing Machine in the Market.