Rev. David Y. Ross, M.A., of Westport, held very satisfactory meetings in the Presbyterian Church in Toledo and Farmersville on Saturday last. Mr. T. M. Porter, the efficient head master of our model school, has been offered a good position in the Normal School at Toronto, but he believes has not fully made up his mind as to his acceptance of the appointment. The School Board are, we understand, making every effort to induce Mr. Porter to remain here. If he goes to Toronto the change will be much to his own advantage, but his removal would be a severe loss to the educational interests of this section, for as good a teacher could not be secured without great difficulty. We voice the opinion of the community when we say that we hope Mr. Porter will decide to remain with us.

AN EVENTFUL TRIP ON THE B. & W.

New Certain Individuals Made Further their Way to the West.

Now that regular trains are being run on the B. & W., everybody is just dying to try the new mode of conveyance. Old and young alike are flocking to the long and enticing excursion on Saturday, when two Farmersville couples started out on a little trip on their own account. The party consisted of a certain jovial and hearty knight of the cross—James, the ex-copier from rural parts down east. Being at the station on the arrival of the 10 train, the party hurried into the passenger coach to view the gorgeousness of its fittings. Conductor Flagg, with his customary courtesy, combined with a spice of gallantry, showed the party around, and in reply to a request for a seat which was supposed to mean that he would take them out half a mile and set them down at the "choke cherry tree." The train glided along so swiftly and smoothly, that the excursionists took no note of the distance, until the ex-school marksman changed to see from the windows landmarks which indicated proximity to the fourth or fifth mile post west of Farmersville. The conductor was at once sought, but he could not be found. In this predicament, they were still further embarrassed to find that the entire party had left their "portmanteaus" at home, and that the available combined "spendix" amounted to but the price of a chess set. "Blah! Blah!" was about again and again by the frantic excursionists, who feared that they would soon land penniless and disgraced, in Delta, unless the train would stop and let them off. But finally turned up and informed them they could not think of letting them off on the track, as there was danger of their perishing with cold and hunger. Finally he relented, but when our party had been served, they discovered that they had also reached a terra incognita. "I have no doubt that terra incognita and other frightful bugaboos existed in the woods thereabouts—in fact the situation was a regular terror. An Italian man, not improved by the fact that the inhabitants had to build at this season a big fire to keep themselves warm. Gathering around the blaze, the party warmed their toes, and it is to be recorded that "Jimmy burned a tassel off his slipper, in his eagerness to warm up his pedal extremities. There being no change of another train that day, the weary excursionists started for the highway, and reaching it were surprised to find that they were only four miles from home and mother—no, supper. After hocking it a quarter of a league on the "Queen's own," they concluded to give up the track, which eventually brought them home, or rather permitted them to take themselves home upon its surface. We have no space to enumerate their varied experiences and the strange things they saw and will make room for another Italian navy, who was observed getting ready his supper, consisting of a big raw potato, which he peeled with a two-edged dagger, and seasoned with the dust of the track. His dessert was a bunch of choke cherries, which he had evidently picked a week before, and used as a pillow in the zodiacal. Weary, hungry and footsore, the party reached the western suburbs, from which point the manipulator of the forenoon was directed to forage in the town for three or four sticks of Hanson's Corn Salve, to ease the excruciating pains felt in the feet of all the party. Reaching Main street just as evening closed in, the party, very congratulated and friends upon their safe return.

REPAIRS for all kinds of Machinery by the undersigned. GEORGE & HICKMAN, 203 Wilson St. H. McLAUGHLIN, 203

THE Old-fashioned Baker's Death was 13. There being nothing odd-fashioned about me I go on better, and make it 14.

For the next thirty days I will give FOURTEEN percent on each picture who orders on cash, and further, I guarantee that every picture mounted out of my gallery shall be first class. I have secured the services of Mr. H. KAPLAN, a skilled engraver and retoucher, whose eggs alone are an artist's pride and high.
