glance of the flying form and, with a cry of horror, darted forward in the dark to estch it. He soon brought the fireman in with the exclamation : " Great heavens, come quick ! it's a woman and she has no clothes on at all !" "Yes, I am a girl, but don't tell any. body," answered the woman whom the policeman had caught and was too astonished to let go. " I want to stay here tonight and don't want any one to know where " But you haven't any clothes on, not even shoes and atookings," said Officer

Belleisle, " and you are cold. Where are your clothes? " They are about a mile from here, up in the park. I pulled them all off so could outrun the doctors and the nurse, and so people wouldn't know me, and I did outrun them and people got scared of me and ran away and the horses all got scared, too, and I ran in here and am going to stay,

The engineer's old stiff and greasy overalls were produced by the fireman, and the now shivering girl was induced to put them on. Then the old coat was brought and wrapped around the slender form and buttoned up to the chin. A light was brought and both men were astonished to see before them a tall, slender, delicatesnow, an oval face with refinement, cultivation and intellect showing in every line, dark gray eyes, with a sparkling, alert expression, and black hair. The North Halated atreet patrol waggon was called, and the poor girl was taken to the East Chicego evenue station, but an hour later she was returned to the sanitarium in charge of the physicians.

A RELIC OF OTHER DAYS.

The Late Duchess of Cambridge Congratulated her Son on his Seventieth Birth-

A London cable says; The demise of the vonerable Duchess of Cambridge within three months of completing her 92od year, and just ten days after congratulating her son on the mornin of his 70th birthday, negts the Court of George III. with his granddaughter. Although the Duchesa generations, who brought their presents as evident that her strength was failing fogt. In the following month she took to her bed, was no pain or suffering at the last, and, (although she was unable to listen to the martial music she loved so well, a plano was wheeled into her bed room that she might enjoy the singing and playing of Signor Tosti. Her memory retained its full vigor, and almost to the end she could regollect the events of the day quite as distinctly as the conversations of George III. and Queen Charlotte, or such remote evente as her standing on the terrace at Rumpenheim and seeing Napoleon riding away after his defeat at Leipsio. The Duchess, in spite of her kindness of heart, was a woman of iron will and indomitable energy. She antertained decided opinions on certain subjects, and never failed to express them. In her George IV always found a courageous champion, for she never forgot his kindness to her brother-in-law, whose ministure surrounded by dismonds was one of her most prized treasures.

DIED AMONG STRINGER!

A Toronto Woman's 4ad Story and Lone's A Harrisville despatch says; Mrs. Annie Gardner, aged 32, was found dead in bed at this place on Friday morning. Five years ago she was a happy wife and the mother of two bright boys. She then lived with her husband in Toronto. An estrangement occurred and one night her husband took the two boys and came to Michigan. The distracted wife and mother followed, and after a weary search, located him near Green Bush, a small village six miles south of Harrisville, Mrs. Gardner came by steamer to Harrisville, but her husband | daughter.
