The Silver Quarters. A paragraph which appeared in a contemporary a few days ago to the effect that all silver quarters which do not bear a small cap "H" on the reverse side under the knot are counterfeit, has created consternation in some paris of the country. The statement was not correct. A majority of the silver quarters do not bear the letter "H" at the place mentioned. The explanation of the mark is this: All British coins are supposed to be issued from the Royal mint, and the large majority in dirculation have been so issued. Now and again, however, the pressure of work at the mint becomes so great and urgency being necessary some coinage has to be done out-
