The sensational incident of the Cronin grand jury proceedings this morning was the refusal of Wm. E. Bell, of the Western Union Telegraph Company, to obey an order of the jury to produce messages passing between Alexander Sullivan, Dan Coughlin, P. O. Sullivan, John J. Maroney and G. W. Melville. Mr. Bell maintained that it was against the rules of the company to produce such messages, and that the statutes of the State imposed a fine of $5,000 upon a telegraph company for divelging the contents of any personal or business messages passing over its lines. After all attempts to induce the witness to obey had failed, the jury, headed by Bate-Attorney Longenecker, repaired the solvent of the solvent deconders of the shore, shouted to him to keep up to content of the contents of any shore, shouted to him to keep up to content of the contents of any shore, shouted to him to keep up to content of the contents of any shore, shouted to him to keep up to content of the contents of any shore, shouted to him to keep up to content of the contents of the co
