OURSD BIM OF DRINKING.

A Pittsburg Woman Tries a Novel Experiment with Good Sesults. Alderman Beinhauer, of the South Side, has hit upon a novel plan of re-establishing domestic felicity in unhappy homes by ouring convivial husbands of drankenness, says the Pitteburg Disputch.

For some time past all the women and men in the ward-and sometimes from other wards-who do not live happily have been in the habit of seeking the aldermen's advice. Two thirds of the comes that people wish to enter for trial at court could not run the gannilet of the Grand Jury, so the Alderman has adopted another plan, which was unfolded in a conversation with a woman who lost night wished to sue her husband for support. She had no case, and had no grounds either for charges

" I'll sell you how to ours him," said the Alderman. "You just do the same as he does. If he cornes home and smashes furniture, you take a poker and help him. If he swears, you swear worse than he does. If he gets drunk, you go and get drunk, too. You can stop him that way, for I have given others the same advice,

"A short time ago a woman come to me and said her husband got drunk and raised a row at home. I told her to do the same, and she said she would. After leaving my office she saw the barkceper of "The next evening she walked boldly into the saloon where her husband and boon companions were ranged along the bar, and said : I say, fellows, its mighty mean weather. Have a drink, will the brimming glass, though it nearly plied the woman.

" As a sequel to the story, the man and woman left the saloon together, and the husband took a solemn vow to never touch liquor again. The couple are now living very happily, and it was bester than a doz n When the alderman finished his tale the woman said : " I'll do the same thing if it kills me." So some recreent husband must
