eve of the day of my death. " (Signed) ERNEST BOULANGER." A Paris despatch says: The property left by Mme. Bonnemain had been judiciously ties up to prevent her bequeathing it to Gen. Boulanger. The first sojourn of the pair in Brusseis and in London cost $200,000. Another $/00,000 was frittered away over his papers and election funds. Beyond needless extravagance he never tried to feather his own nest, as did many of hi pretended adherents. M. Constans, Minis The Big Saurian That Purified Lebanon's ter of the Interior, on hearing of Boulanger's suicide, said he genuinely grieved over the General's death. In other political quarters it is remembered to the General's credit that be practically made the foundation of the entente with Russia. There is little doubt wounded vanity caused him to suffer keenly after his fall. Nobody was more fond of praise and approbation. The General showed symptoms of consumption, of which disease Mmc. Bonnemain died. This knowledge, added to the taint of hereditary insanity, leaves no wonder that he committed the rash act. Boulanger left a will and political testament in his desk. It is stated that the latter shows unshaken confidence in his party, enjoins his friends to prosecute the great aims he always had in yiew, and ascribes his own death solely to inconsolable grief over the loss of Mme. Bonnemain. The funeral will probably take place on Sunday. M. Rochefort, in a published communication, says: " If anything could overcome my deep grief, it is the excess o indignation I feel at the foul abuse poured out on my dear friend by his persecutors. mays the Commission of Inquiry has discovered thirteen bombs on the Rosenthal Railway bridge. The official investigation Bounamaine. shows that two bombs charged with nitro glycerine were placed in the gutter of the tunnel of the bridge. Attached to these bombs was a time fuse, evidently caclulated to cause an explosion at the moment the imperial train was passing. The fuse, however, acted several hours before the train drew near. The explosion esstroyed the masoury above and about the bridge tunnel. The ratiroad officials noon had the road in good repair. The investigating officials profess to believe the explosion was intended merely as a demonstration of disapprova with some of the Emperor's acts. Now that it is officially admitted that bombs have been used along the line of the Emperor's journey, the utmost indignation prevails. The general feeling is one of indignation against those engaged in the conspiracy There have been no arrests.
