They are all jolly good fellows and we wish them good luck and a safe return to their homes and families.

The protracted meeting which has been going on for the last two or three weeks has come to a close.

The Story of a Cat.
An Odenburg city carter was driving through the third ward a few days ago, when he was hailed by a lady who asked him if he would carry away a cat for her. He replied that she would be, he placed them at a quarter, and he given the cat which the lady wished to be rid of, and paid a quarter. He drove on and when about two blocks away met two young ladies. One of them exclaimed, "Oh, what a pretty cat that man has got! Mr. will you sell that cat?" The carter replied that he would, and the young lady was delighted, exclaiming that she had one just like it at her home and a mate for it was just what she wanted. The price of the cat was fixed at a quarter, which was paid, and the young lady departed with the animal in her arms. It transpired that the lady who purchased the cat was the daughter of the lady who paid the carter to take it away, and the cat was returned to the same household. What the feelings of the mother were when she saw the daughter returning with the cat she paid to get rid of, or what the feelings of the young lady were when she found she had procured the very thing she had so safely left to the imagination, is not to be conjectured.
