Life's Sensons. The seasons of the year, They come and go with varying tread Their loys so quickly past and dead, We drop for each a tear, A child in careless glee,

Singing her songs with sunny, happy face. Trying in vain her shadow to outrace. And failing laughingly. Rich in her beauty fair, A maiden with dark-fring'd eyes, Hearing in aly and sweet surprise Love's old, old story rare.

As seeing now once more
Too old-time, happy, blissful days,
A mother in her children's joys and plays
Her youth again lives o'er. Toward her setting sun
An aged woman's footstepe tend,
Her journey almost at an end,
Life's sands are nearly run. The seasons of the year Are likened to each stage of life,

With all its onres and sorrows rife, Its happiness and fear. Bolly Town. Have you ever been to Dolly Town, There the do lies walk, And the dollies talk, And they ride about, in a grand turn-out, With a coachman thin,

Who is made of tin, And a footman made of wood. There are very fine houses in Dolly Town, ted and green and blue; And a doctor grand, Who is at command, Just to mend their toes, And their arms and nose, When they tumble down, And crack their crown,

His medicine is glue. But the prettiest sight in Dolly Town-The place of great renown-Is no dolly at all, Though so neat and small, f you've time to spare. do on tiptoe there : See the wee, wee girl, The rose, the pearl, Who is Queen of Dolly Town.

> Winter's rule is dreary, Doleful, bleak and long How we yearn for sunshine,
> Beauty, bloom and song,
> Allis desolation,—
> Meadow, mound and cloud; Nature, stark and paltid, Wears a snowy shroud

Skies are dull and cloudy, Frost is the air : See! the spreading meerland O'er in language whiteness

Winter's realm is gloomy, Yet fair Beauty's hiding By his snowy throne. March, wild-voiced and blust'ry, Soon will pass away, And sweet April's music

Wake the flowers of May. Get thee gone ! cold winter, Far across the main; Go! for smiling Springtime Brings us joy again ;

Thou hast ruled too lone Welcome! Summer's herald Waken bloom and song. ADVICE TO GIRLS.
