There was a time when the young people of the country hastened to pair themselves with bird-like eagerness and delight, as soon as they were out of school; and society not only encouraged them, but practically commanded them to take that course. They were considered superfluous and burdensome until they got married. The true work of life could not begin with them, they were taught, so long as they remained single; it was their duty to become yoked without unnecessary delay, and it was a disgrace to miss reasonable opportunities in that relation. But it is decidedly different at the present day. The practice of wedlock is no longer imperative nor does discredit attend the unmated state, even when prolonged into the thirties. There is as much advice given against marriage as in favor of sexes, and the result is a steady decrease in the proportion of actual weddings t possible ones .- St. Louis Globe-Democras.
