A Word About Stogas

It may be possible during dry weather for a farmer to get along with a pair of leath boots, or a cheap long boot, but for wet fall weather you want a good long boot, one that will wear and keep out water. We have such a boot. It is the best ever made in Canada, hand bottomed, outside cowhide and extra long leg, for $12 a pair. This season we can give you the same boot, only a shorter leg for $12.50. Knowing them to be the best long boots made we constructed for large quantities of them and have sole owners of them. We guarantee every pair. If you want a good boot and want dry feet you will get direct to

MURDER and ARSON

Triple Tragedy and a Horrible Deed of Incendiarism.

Strong Circumstantial Evidence Points to a Son of the Murdered Farmer as the Perpetrator.

The little hamlet of Newbliss is situated about four miles in a northerly direction from Toledo, on the main line and leading to Smith's Falls. On a concession road about half a mile west of Newbliss, in the farm of John J. Luckey, sr. Here, on Saturday last, was enacted a triple tragedy, surpassing in revolting enormity anything ever before committed in this part of Canada.

The following brief account was gathered by a Reporter representative who visited the scene on Monday. The Luckey family consisted of Jas. J. Luckey, his wife (a second marriage), and a daughter of some twenty-five years. On Saturday morning Mr. Luckey drove to Irish Creek and from there to Smith's Falls, where his daughter went across the fields, a distance of half a mile, to her brother's, leaving Mrs. Luckey alone in the house. About one o'clock Mr. Luckey was observed driving in through the gate towards the house, and in less than half an hour thereafter a daughter of Mr. A. Parker, who lives directly on the opposite side of the road, and about forty rods distant, observed a dense column of smoke arising from the house of the Luckeys. She called her father and mother, and they all ran over to the place and found the inside of the building enveloped in flames and the doors all fastened. Just previous to this, some men who were threshing at another farm house in the vicinity heard screams in the direction of the Luckey place, and seeing that it was some children at play, paid no attention to it until they saw smoke issuing from the building, when they all ran over, reaching the house about the same time as the Parkers. The sight that met their gaze was one that might well appal and horrify the soul. In the yard in front of the house lay the nearly consumed body of Mrs. Luckey, while the body of Mr. Luckey and the girl could be discerned in a like condition in the cellar, having gone down with the burning floor. Every effort was made to drag the bodies from the burning debris, but it was not until the building was totally consumed and water had been thrown on the bodies that parties could venture near enough to extricate them. This was finally done by means of a wire attached to a long pole. The bodies presented a horrible appearance, but were beyond recognition. The remains were all placed in a box about a foot wide and four feet long. Those present began to speculate on the cause of the fire and the death of all three persons in the middle of the day, and the unanimous verdict of all was that murder, arson, had been committed and the building fired in order to conceal evidence of the crime.

A neighboring farmer named John Polk was amongst those who got to the scene while this speculation was going on and he remembered that while going to and returning from the scene he had seen a stranger whose actions now seemed suspicious to him, and he at once drove to Smith's Falls and began making enquiries. He soon learned that a stranger answering the description he gave was at the Palace Hotel, and enquiries elicited the fact that he had come to the evening and seemed very much agitated. So much so that he could not write his own name on the register, but requested the proprietor to sign the name of Charles Kingston, and had then gone to a room number 11, where he had been seen by the Police. McGowan was sent for and the man was placed under arrest. He at first stoutly maintained that his name was Kingston, or Kingsley, but on being told of the murder and arson he admitted that his name was Charles Luckey, that he was a son of the murdered man, that he had been out murdering men, that he had been in the neighborhood of his father's place, but said he did not go there as he did not wish any one to know that he was in the neighborhood. He was taken to the lock-up and McGowan started early on Sunday morning for the scene of the tragedy. The ground was carefully gone over and in a clump of trees, south of the house, tracks were found that showed some person had been on the watch at that place. Between the trees and the house a lot of small burr bushes were noticed and the prisoner's hands had a number of the same kind of burrs on when he was arrested.

The generally accepted theory is that the murderer must have gone to the house and despatched the old lady first, and then lay in wait for the old man. The team that Luckey drove were put in the stable and harness, and he attacked outside the house, as her false teeth were found about forty feet from the door, and it was likely her screams that were heard by the neighbors. When she arrived and saw her dear parent, she probably started to return by the way she had thought, pursued her and either struck her down or choked off her screams and then dragged her back to

to the house and threw her alongside of her dead parents. Then to cover up his awful day's work he set fire to the building in several places and died. The suspected man Charles Luckey has not lived at home for some four years, and it is said, on account of a difficulty he had with his father, threatening that when he did return it would not be well for the old man. About a year ago he stole a coat from a hotel in Ottawa and was sent to the Central Prison, and was only liberated on Friday last. He is a young man of about 25 years, and is rather prepossessing in appearance. He is said to be very little concerned over his arrest on a charge of committing one of the most heinous crimes that ever blotted the criminal annals of Canada. Dr. Yaux, coroner, arrived on the scene on Monday morning and after empanelling a jury and viewing the remains and the scene of the tragedy, adjourned the inquest until Wednesday morning at 9 a.m. at the village of Irish Creek. The funeral of the three murdered Luckeys took place at the Presbyterian church, Toledo, of which church Mr. Luckey was an elder.

A Reporter representative obtained three good photographs of the ruins and surroundings, which will be exposed in the window of the Reporter office when finished.

WESTPORT.

FRIDAY, Oct. 7.—The funeral services of the late Mrs. A. Taggart, of the village, was conducted in the Methodist church on Wednesday by the Rev. James Piets. The deceased was an old and respected resident. She had reached the advanced age of 77 years.

Messrs. Connelly & Wing are improving the appearance of their furniture shop by re-boarding it.

Mr. Earl, late of Brockville, has opened up a new grocery in the premises on Bedford street lately occupied by Mr. Hazelton.

Miss Edna Webster left per str. Lido-Belle on Monday night on a visit to friends in Port Hope.

Miss Edna Reynolds left on Tuesday afternoon for Ottawa to take a course in Coligny college.

A duck hunting party, consisting of Messrs. Cumming and Nelson of Lyn and others, passed through here this week on their way to the upper lakes.

Dr. Leavitt, of Detroit, formerly of this place, paid a visit this week. He made many calls both social and professional.

Married, in the Presbyterian church on Tuesday, by Rev. J. B. Huff, Miss Norris to Mr. McMunn, both of Sherbrooke.

Messrs. W. H. Frederburgh and J. H. Whelan have been to Watertown to try to make the final arrangements for starting a paper mill here in the near future. We wish them unbounded success. The industry would involve an outlay of about $40,000 and would furnish labor to quite a large number of men.

Another one of those quiet marriages, for which our village has become noted of late, occurred a short time ago in the marriage of Miss V. A. Tryon to Mr. C. E. McGuire. If it is not too late we wish the young couple much joy, and a happy voyage "o'er the sea of life."

While the bus of the Westport House was going to the train on Thursday night, the horse was frightened by a dog and became unmanageable. Wheeling, the horse ran down Church street, and fell near the Methodist church where it was caught.

The partridge in this section are either very abundant, or else they are becoming very scarce. Several have been shot in the trees near the village, but one was shot on Friday evening, by Harry Arnold, in front of Mrs. Kelly's on Spring street, in the heart of the village.

The funeral of Mrs. Maurice Tain, Sr., was held in the B. C. Church on Sunday.

We had a few flakes of snow on Wednesday.

Mrs. McCormack and wife, of Ogdensburg, are visiting their friends, the Misses Taggart.

W. J. Rhine, familiarly called "Willie," left from Unionville, Ontario, on a visit to his native town, Westport. From appearances we would judge that a warmer climate agrees with him well.

The hop picking on the farm of James Hughes, Bathurst, was done by five Indians and twenty-seven squaws, Cornwall, and it took them two weeks to do the work. They picked 845 boxes, about 8,000 pounds.

The matron of the Mercer Reformatory for women at Toronto told the grand jurors last week that the reason there were not more inmates in the institution was because the Salvation Army was making its beneficial influence felt.

There is not and there cannot be, any smoking tobacco superior to the "Myrtle Navy brand." A wrapper of brighter appearance and higher price it is possible to get, but all wrappers are very poor smoking tobacco and a single leaf is wrapped round a plug. The stock used in the body of the "Myrtle Navy" plug is the very best which money can purchase. The power of the Virginia soil can produce nothing better, and no other soil in the world can produce as fine tobacco as that of Virginia.

Attention has again been called to the old trick of unscrupulous cheese exporters who have American cheese sent to England through Montreal and passed off as Canadian cheese, by a somewhat peculiar incident related by The New York Commercial Bulletin. A note reading as follows was found enclosed in a bottle placed in a cheese which the purchaser in England had bought for Canada:—"The receiver of this cheese will please do the favor and answer this, and write us home and address, what he paid for it and how it is." The epistle was signed by a factoryman of a town in Wisconsin. The Wisconsin dealer who sold the cheese doubtless had no knowledge of the intention of the exporter to ship it by way of Montreal. This matter of mixing Canadian and American cheese for export from Montreal should receive attention.

A Monster Cheese.

As enormous cheese month was shipped from Ottawa to Paris on Tuesday, where it will be used under the direction of Prof. Robertson, Dominion dairy commissioner, for manufacturing the monster Canadian cheese intended for the Chicago World's Fair. The monster stands seven feet high and is nine feet in diameter. In order to make the cheese arrangements are being made for securing three days' milk of six hundred cows. The weight of the cheese when made will be something enormous, running into the thousands of pounds. This triumph of dairy work will form a part of the experimental farm exhibit at Chicago next year.
