JOSHUA WARREN A Leeds County Boy Who Has Made a Home Parish's last Monday night. A very and Fortune in the Western States.

About twenty seven years ago, Joshua Warren, then an energetic and ambitous young man, left his father's farm, about two miles north of the village of Elgin, in this county, to seek his fortune. He first apprenticed himself to David Mansell, of Farmersville as a dry goods clerk.

Went away thinking it good to these together, especially under the hos pitable roof of Mr. Parish.

Mr. Mack Kelly, after spending a few days at his home, has returned to which I quoted last week made quite a stir, and brought considerable business, though, of course, not very much profit—but that's my own affair.

Now, I am going to do some housecleaning this spring, or shop-cleaning, rather, and in order to have room to that gentleman in a little factory uncle, Amasa W. Kelly. Wing's woodshed, about a halt a mile east of Athens, then Farmersville.
