A LIFE OF COMPORY. The British Club Man Lives it on $1,500 a

The life of an English club man, with say $1,500 to $1,800 a year, involves economies that to the average American would be impossible, if he knew that by going to work he could carn as much more. It means lodgings in some quiet street at considerably less than similar lodgings would cost here; breakfast at the lodgings, a lumehous romewhere clos, and t the club or at the house of a friend. It is possible to dress decently on very little, so that the young man is able to dine at the club the year round ; if need be, to have his little run in the country, his cruise on a friend's yacht, or his fishing in the Highlands or in Norway.

It is common in London clubs of the quiet kind to provide a table d'hote dinner at 3 shillings and 6 pence. The diner may have, in addition, for 30 or 40 cents, a pict of excellent claret. Most of the diners at clubs of very good standing seldom go beyoud the table d'hote and its pint of claret. Even men in comparatively easy circumstances are content with this and anxious that the meal shall be kept within 5 shillings. Something better is often provided | Of Pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil for a guest; but it one member of small income dines with another at the club or elsewhere a return dinner becomes a matter of obligation .- N. Although having little faith he bought a bottle, and before he was through taking it, found he was gaining flesh. He continued taking the Emulsion until he regained nearly fifty pounds. He is the heardest man in town to-day. To commemorate his restoration to health he has had a beautiful golden cod fish manufactured, which he wears as a charm upon his watch chain. That is pretty good testimony for "Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil." Everybody is sounding its
