ENGLAND TO FRANCE.

A Napoleonic Project to Join the Two Countries by Tubular Tunnel. Another scheme to join England and rance is receiving parious consideration in shose countries. It is proposed to build

MAP SHOWING DESECTION OF TUNNEL a double tubular tunnel under the Straits of Dover. The old scheme of building a tunnel under the bed of the sea, which has been advocated by Sir Edward Watkins for years, never received the sanction of the British Parliament, because many conservative Englishmen believe such a construction would facilitate an invasion of the country by the vanquished of Water-

It had also been proposed to bridge the straits. The latest plan has the support of Sir Edward Heed, who is a member of Parliamout and has been Lord of the Treasury and Engineer in Chief of the Admiralty. It has been received with favor by a large number of members of Parliament, and therefore seems to have serious chances of success, and the more so that it avoids the difficulties and objections that were urged against its predicessors

The project consists in simply submerging, between a point of the French coast situated in the vicinity of Cape Gris-Nez and another on the English coast located between Dover and Folkestone, two tubes that would constitute two absolutely separate tunnels, each serving for the passage in one direction of trains drawn by electric

Referring to the map it will be seen that the configuration of the bottom in this part of the channel presents on each side a regular declivity that ends in a gentle slope at a line of greater depth. It will be seen, then, that the mean slope of each tunnel would not much exceed 0.08 inch to the foot. There would, therefore, be found excellent conditions

The tube would be of steel plate with double walls, and the intervening space would be reinforced by I beams and filled in with concrete. The putting in place would be effected by sections of 300 feet, hermetically sealed at each end and floated to the place where they were to be sub-
