Froude's kindness to children has ever been remarkable. I never forget how at Edinburgh, years before, coming down is the morning I found the great man on h's knees intently helping a little boy to pile up a huge castle of bricks, which, indeed, attained to eight feet in height. Nor will that boy forget, while he lives, how, when Edinburg was illuminated on the evening of the wedding of the Prince of Wales, the historian carried the little man on his shoulder through all the chief streets. Froude had said he would like to hear his remarks on what he saw. But, as is the way of this world. Froude was disappoint ed. The boy was stricken stony and could speak no word at all.
