

DEADLY SCORE by Paul Myers.
The fifth in a series featuring Mark Holland, once an operator for the British in international espionage. Retired, he is now based in Geneva, the manager of classical musicians who fulfill engagements around the globe. Mark's past continues to catch up with him at inconvenient moments and in Tokyo an alarming encounter with a wounded and apparently dying man, thrusts him once again into intrigue and danger. The complicated story takes him from Tokyo to Britain, America to Germany and keeps the reader on tenderhooks, Such skulduggery, but very entertaining.

A TWIST IN THE TALE by Jeffrey Archer.
Not being addicted to short stories I approached this book with little anticipation. What a pleasant surprise lurks in the twelve stories by Mr. Archer, best selling author of Not a Penny More, Not a Penny Less and Kane and Able. Each delightful story holds attention from the first sentence and every ending is a total and very satisfying revelation. As the blurb says it is written with wit, suspense and sophistication; all this in elegant prose.

In for a Penny (The Unauthorized Biography of Jeffrey Archer) Jonathan Mantle

In one of his first novels, Not a Penny More, Not a Penny Less, Jeffrey Archer wrote about the revenge plans of a group of men who have been taken in by a con. Archer wrote this based on a con in which he himself had been a victim. And every time something happened to Archer, he wrote a new best-selling thriller. This biography of Archer reads like one of his own works with the usual and unusual ups and downs of the hero. It even included the recent libel suit Archer won against the British tabloid The Star which accused him of trying to pay off a prostitute who threatened to talk about their so-called relationship. Makes one wonder just how Jeffrey Archer is going to use this incident in his next novel.

The Pebbled Shore Elizabeth Longford

Elizabeth Longford, biographer of the British Aristocracy, daughter of a family of biographers (daughter Antonia Fraser, granddaughter Flora Fraser) has selected herself as the subject of this biography. Related to the Chamberlains, married to the Earl of Longford, one of the few female members of a select Oxford intellectual group, Longford's life proves well worthy of the research, attention to detail and sensitivity one associates with an Elizabeth Longford biography.

Toscanini's Fumble (And Other Cases of Clinical Neurology)

Dr. Harold L. Klawans
In one of Toscanini's last performances as a conductor of the NBC symphony, he suddenly stopped and NBC Radio had to fill in 5 minutes with some other music until the Maestro took up his baton and continued conducting. Why? A surgeon, with hundreds of successful operations behind him, has to be talked through a gallbladder operation, step by step. Why? Dr. Klawans answers these and other fascinating neurological problems (including Parkinson's disease). He does so in layman's terms and even includes a list of recommended readings at the end of each chapter for those who hunger for more information. This is a great book for those of us who are fascinated by the PBS series The Brain and The Mind.
