THE NEW DEMOCRATS

The Leeds-Grenville New Democrats today expressed their concern about the way in which the Ministry of Natural Resources is responding to local residents concerns about the James Auld Waterway Park.

While public participation is being encouraged a most recent meeting between MNR officials and local residents on Feb. 23rd, proved that opposition to the proposed park is quite extensive. Before the Ministry moves ahead the concerns of the local residents have to be responded to commented John Wilkinson, President of the Leeds-Grenville NDP Riding Association.

Park policies have to guarantee the traditional rights of resource users said Wilkinson. "People have to be assured that their source of income will be protected", he said. "A park is hardly fulfilling its mandate if the culture of the rural community in North Leeds is sacrificed.
